Stavros pleads guilty to 4 charges

Eight charges dropped, but he now faces prison, fines

by LYNN ASINOF

James Stavros pleaded guilty Tuesday in U.S. District Court to extorting a total of $62,000 from three Wheeling developers and filing a false 1972 income tax return.

The guilty pleas came as part of an agreement with the U. S. Attorney's Office in which eight additional counts against Stavros were dropped, including charges of extorting an additional $121,250 from Wheeling developers.

STAVROS, FORMER Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, faces a maximum of 63 years imprisonment and up to $35,000 in fines. Sentencing is scheduled for June 4 before U. S. District Judge Hubert Will.

In changing his plea, Stavros, 43, admitted to:

- Extorting $32,000 from the Zale Construction Co., developers of Lakeside Villas, in the spring of 1971.

- Extorting $30,000 from Bernard Kron of Harmony Builders, developers of Harmony Village, in January 1973.

- Extorting $30,000 with Wheeling Building Dir. William Bieber from the Meister-Neiberg Co., developers of Lake of the Winds, in December 1972.

- Filing a false 1972 income tax return in which he "substantially understated his income."

The U. S. Attorney's Office gathered

massive amounts of evidence of payoffs to Stavros, which was to be presented during the trial scheduled to begin Monday. A bill of particulars filed by the government charged that Stavros extorted more than $300,000 from developers beginning in 1958.

THE GOVERNMENT planned to picture Stavros as an extortionist who threatened his victims with physical harm unless they paid him off. The prosecutors intended to show Stavros' control over key Wheeling positions, which enabled him to threaten developers with permit and construction delays.

The new income tax charge was filed by the U. S. Attorney's Office Tuesday just prior to Stavros' change of plea. The one-count criminal information did not specify how much 1972 income Stavros failed to report.

"We also filed with the court an agreement which was entered into, which in essence stated that he would plead guilty to the things I've described and at the time of disposition the remaining counts would be dismissed," said Asst. U. S. Atty. Steven Kadison.

KADISON SAID his office will make known its case against Stavros at the time of sentencing.

Stavros' attorney, Robert J. Butler, said the agreement filed in court provides his client with substantial protection against further prosecutions.

"All pending investigations will be terminated," Butler said. "The U. S. Attorney will not prosecute for any other violations prior to the year 1974. The agreement is quite comprehensive. It covers all pending and contemplated charges and current investigations."

While Butler would not comment on whether Stavros was providing information to the government, he said that the U. S. Attorney's Office might testify to such cooperation at the time of sentencing.

Stavros is the second person to plead guilty to charges stemming from a federal grand jury investigation into alleged shakedowns of Wheeling developers and businesses.

MICHAEL VALENZA, former Wheeling trustee, pleaded guilty to conspiring with William Bieber to extort furniture from Wickes, Inc. Stavros also damaged Bieber's defense by pleading guilty in a

Village board action seen

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling officials said Tuesday they expect some official board action in response to James Stavros' admission that he extorted $62,000 from three Wheeling developers.

Reacting with shock and surprise, several trustees said the board will have to take steps to make sure that a similar scandal never occurs in Wheeling again.

"I would hope that we would take some sort of action to eliminate the possibility of this ever happening again."

Trustee Don Jackson said. "One of the things I would like to see is an independent consulting firm come in and help us so that the village does not get into a situation like this again."

Jackson noted that the government cases against Stavros, former trustee Michael Valenza and Building Director William Bieber cited the use of official village positions to extort goods and money from developers.

"I still can't believe that one man or

Thompson record still perfect

Guilty pleas by James Stavros Tuesday maintained the 100 per cent conviction record of U.S. Atty. James Thompson's suburban corruption investigation.

In other cases disposed of so far, the following have either pleaded guilty or been convicted in U.S. District Court.

- Michael Valenza, former Wheeling Trustee and political associate of Stavros. He admitted guilt in a conspiracy to commit extortion after a second extortion charge was dropped.

- Six former Hoffman Estates village officials, including the community's first two mayors, Edward F. Pinger and Roy L. Jenkins. They pleaded guilty to accepting bribes from a developer, Kaufman and Broad Inc., which itself pleaded no contest to charges of bribery. Bernard M. Peskin, the firm's attorney, was convicted of passing payoffs to the officials.

- Mayor Curtis Whitaker of south suburban Westhaven, convicted on two extortion charges.

Charges are pending against officials of Wheeling, Brookfield, Calumet City and Cook County. Probes by Thompson's special investigations division continues in county government and more than 40 suburbs.

Requests for more staff before schools

Additional staff recommendations for the 1974-75 school year will be brought before the Dist. 23 school board at its meeting tonight. The meeting is set for 7:30 p.m. in the board office at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads, Prospect Heights.

The recommendations will include the hiring of a librarian to be shared by the elementary schools, a learning disabilities teacher, a school nurse and an additional teacher to be held in reserve for either Eisenhower or John Muir School.

The board is also expected to consider an administration recommendation to place 11 staff members on tenure.

Bids on custodial supplies and equipment also will be presented.

State studying 'one arsonist' theory

Chelsea Cove fires may be arson

Officials of the State Fire Marshal's Office are investigating the possibility that the four fires at the Chelsea Cove development in Wheeling since March 21 may have been the work of the same arsonist.

The two most recent fires occurred Monday at the Holywood Builders development near Old McHenry and Elmhurst roads. The largest fire caused an estimated $3,000 damage to a furnished model at 810 Barnaby Ln. just after 3:30 p.m. Monday. According to Wheeling Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen this fire started in a mattress in a second floor bedroom.

The second fire, which apparently extinguished itself, was discovered later at 820 Barnaby Ln. Koeppen said the fire was apparently set in the vanity cabinet of an upstairs bathroom. But the fire, he added, fused some water pipes, causing them to burst and extinguish the flames.

KOEPPEN SAID traces of this second fire, which caused an estimated $500 damage, were discovered when the water began leaking into a downstairs toilet.

The two earlier fires occurred in second floor closets — one causing $50 damage on March 21 at 815 Coventry Pl., the other causing $3,000 damage March 22 at another, unnamed townhouse on Coventry Place.

In each of the four cases, Koeppen has listed the cause of the fire as "possible arson." The first fire started in a pile of rubbish stacked in the closet.

The State Fire Marshal's investigator was at the scene late Tuesday afternoon. The scenes of Monday's two fires had been sealed off until his inspection.

KOEPPEN WOULD not rule out vandalism as a cause of the fires. "We don't know," he said, but pointed out that all four fires apparently were started about the same time of day. The three fires put out by firemen were reported at 3:48 p.m., 4:15 p.m. and 3:35 p.m. The time of the fourth fire is unknown.

Wheeling police apparently intend to step up patrols in the construction area, which has been the only construction site plagued by fires "of suspicious origin," according to Koeppen. It is unknown what those stepped up patrol measures will consist of, however.

"We suspect it's arson, but we can't prove it yet," Koeppen said.

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
First in a series

A hospital building boom is following the population, branching out from the central city and rushing into suburbia.

Schaumburg, Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Barrington top a list of proposed Northwest suburban hospital sites that divides planning experts and excites local civil leaders.

Suburban officials, with eyes on a substantial increase in community services at little direct cost to taxpayers, are greeting the hospital derby with open arms. But, planners are warning that proposed construction will greatly exceed demand for new beds, pushing up hospital costs to all patients.

Seven new hospitals are proposed for suburbs in DuPage, northwest Cook and Lake counties. More than 1,512 new beds are planned. Total construction could exceed $80 million.

THE LIST OF proposed projects in metropolitan Chicago, which now has 36,502 hospital beds, includes 30 new hospitals or satellites and grows weekly.

Actual need for hospital construction is a controversy among administrators and health planners. Projections vary, one recently released report shows a need for 94 additional beds in local suburbs by 1979 and another predicts a demand for 750 more beds by 1990.

Area hospital proposals include:

- Schaumburg: A 180-bed, $12 million satellite of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago as approved in October by the Illinois Hospital Licensing Board. Construction is planned this summer and the hospital is seeking $42 million in low-interest bonds from the Illinois Health Facilities Authority to build tandem projects in Schaumburg and Park Forest.

- Hoffman Estates: A 312-bed, $14.3 million for-profit hospital operated as a franchise of American Mediacorp Inc. of Pennsylvania has received a state permit and opening is expected in early 1976.

- Wheeling: A 228-bed, $11.3 million general hospital proposed by Franklin Boulevard Hospital of Chicago was approved by the licensing board April 10.

- Glendale Heights: A 186-bed, $7.9 million general hospital proposed by Central Community Hospital of Chicago received state approval in December. Central Community is a sister hospital of Franklin Boulevard and the controversial project is similar to the planned facility in Wheeling.

- Barrington: A 226-bed, $11.7 million

The breakdown by hospital...

Results of a Northwest Cook County hospital inventory show 1,531 existing beds with a projected need for 94 additional beds, or a total of 1,625. No new hospitals are recommended. The 94 beds could be added to existing facilities, the state hospital plan indicates.

Hospital	Existing Beds	1973 Admissions
Northwest Community	433	14,437
Resurrection	157	4,362
Holy Family	240	9,210
Alexian Brothers	302	14,344
Lutheran General	399	19,121
TOTAL	1,531	61,474

hospital is planned for fall construction by the Evangelical Hospital Assn. The "Good Shepherd Hospital" will be one of a three-hospital "system" that includes Christ Community Hospital in Oak Lawn and Good Samaritan Hospital under construction in Downers Grove.

- Addison: A 180-bed, $12.5 million hospital is part of a long-range plan by DuPage Memorial Hospital of Elmhurst. The project was approved in December by the state and includes initial construction of an emergency treatment facility and a physician office-clinic.

- Glenview-Northbrook: A 200-bed, $13 million satellite of Evanston Hospital is state approved. The acute-care hospital project drew homeowners' protests during plan commission hearings in January but was annexed and rezoned by the Glenview Village Board April 15.

Mt. Sinai Hospital Medical Center of Chicago and Sherman Hospital of Elgin also are considering suburban expansion. Sherman received licensing board permission April 10 to build a 125-bed, $6 million hospital in Crystal Lake. Mt. Sinai, which has announced plans for a north suburban branch, reportedly has an option for 125-acres at Dundee and Sanders roads in Northbrook.

PREDICTIONS OF need for hospital construction are "tricky and controversial," according to Ted Brzyski, Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission health planning officer. Bed need projections are kept secret as "in-house, working" documents by the numerous health-planning agencies that examine hospital construction proposals. Each agency has individual statistics and formulas for determining construction need.

Need for hospital construction "is nothing like the five, six or seven they're talking about," said urbanologist Pierre de Vise, former head of the Chicago Regional Hospital Study. "Unoccupied beds in local hospitals could increase by 20 per cent if all proposed hospitals are built," he said.

The controversy is statistical. Planning agencies use complicated formulas that include estimated future population, daily hospital admissions, number of existing beds, residence and age of patients and type of treatment to estimate need for hospital construction.

The "bible" of bed-need estimates is the Illinois Comprehensive State Health Planning Agency's "Survey and Plan," a bi-annual report designed to guarantee "adequate" health services "without unnecessary duplication."

IN 1972, THE STATE report listed 1,534 existing beds in the Northwest suburban area at Resurrection Hospital in Chicago, Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village, Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights and Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines. Projected six-year bed need for the area was 544 additional beds.

The revised, 1974 state plan, released in preliminary form this month, now shows a need for only 94 additional beds in the area by 1979, despite increased population. Spokesmen for the state said the 450-bed decrease in projected need is caused by changes in the bed-need for-

Stavros pleads guilty; 4 counts

James Stavros, accused of extorting more than $300,000 from Wheeling developers, pleaded guilty Tuesday to four federal felony charges. He faces up to 63 years in prison and $35,000 in fines. Stavros, 43, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, admitted guilt to three extortion counts and a new tax evasion charge filed against him Tuesday morning by the U.S. Attorney James Thompson's office. He was indicted Jan. 31 along with five others, including former Wheeling trustee Michael Valenza, who has pleaded guilty to a single extortion conspiracy charge. Stavros has been a behind-the-scenes influence in Wheeling village government for more than a decade. His plea of guilty came after the U.S. Attorney's office agreed to drop eight other counts against him. Stavros will be sentenced June 4.

Lillian Piotrowski dies

Cook County Comr. Lillian Piotrowski died Thursday. Miss Piotrowski, a Chicago Democrat who was appointed to the board Feb. 4, 1964 and was elected in 1966, was the second board member to die this year. Republican Comr. William Erickson of Evanston died in March. Miss Piotrowski left county board offices Wednesday after complaining of chest pains. She died en route from her home, 2619 W. 38th Pl., to Holy Cross Hospital. She was a seven-term member of the Illinois General Assembly before her appointment to the board. In June, 1969, Miss Piotrowski was elected 22nd Ward committeeman. Funeral arrangements are pending at Palacz Funeral Chapel, 2055 W. 56th St., Chicago.

Suburbs are 'losers'

The fragmented Chicago suburbs are losing out because they have no effective voice to represent their interests, a U.S. Chamber of Commerce official told local business and community leaders Tuesday. Lawrence K. Brainard, a lobbyist for the chamber among Illinois and Indiana congressmen, said the result is that urban Chicago and rural downstate leaders are deciding questions that affect the suburbs. "Without the development of some kind of suburban strategy," Brainard told a meeting of local chamber of commerce representatives, "the suburban voters will continue to think in terms of the old rural or urban ties without seeing what is best for the suburbs as a unit."

Penny Rouse found innocent

Penny Rouse, 24, of 2120 Hassell Rd., Hoffman Estates, was found innocent Monday in Niles branch of Cook County Circuit Court of prostitution charges and keeping a house of prostitution. Mrs. Rouse originally had been scheduled for arraignment Monday morning. She pleaded innocent to the charges, waived a jury trial and was tried before Associate Judge James Maher Jr. Mrs. Rouse was arrested in March after Cook County Sheriff's police raided her Barrington Lakes apartment, which authorities thought was the headquarters for a suburban ring of $200-an-hour prostitutes. All records seized in the raid were ordered destroyed, authorities said.

Apartments opposed

Residents of Northeast Mount Prospect have appealed for help from other village homeowners in their fight to "keep Mount Prospect looking like the area we moved into." They have opposed an apartment building on 3.3 acres at River and Camp McDonald Roads. The group, the Concerned Homeowners of Mount Prospect, warned in a letter to other homeowner associations that a proposed 4,500-unit development on the Rob Roy Golf Course is a "good example of what could happen to our area." The letter listed the names and addresses of village officials and asked for contributions to help fight unwanted rezonings.

RTA appointees win praise of area officials

by STEVE FORSYTH

Local officials have mostly praise for the appointments the suburban Cook County commissioners made to the Regional Transportation Authority Monday.

Loop attorney Joseph Tecson, 46, of Riverside is better known among Republican party leaders, but comments on Tecson and D. Daniel Baldino of Evanston generally reflect confidence in the judgment of the county commissioners.

Mount Prospect Mayor Robert Teichert was a classmate of Tecson's in law school and said, "I've always been an admirer of Joe's." As for the appointment, Teichert said, "He's sort of a natural for it. His stature has already been developed."

Teichert was referring to Tecson's consideration as a Republican candidate for president of the county board in last fall's slating. Tecson served as Riverside Township Committeeman for nine years and worked on key issues such as merit selection of judges and the new state constitution.

Baldino, who worked for six years with the Civic Federation in Chicago before taking a job last January as assistant to Illinois Senate Pres. William Harris, is less well known in the Northwest suburbs.

Des Plaines Mayor Herbert Behrel said, "I certainly have confidence in the Republican county commissioners. From what little I know of them (the appointees), they seem to be qualified."

Behrel supported the March 19 RTA referendum and said Tuesday that he was glad to see progress being made in selection of the board, despite conflicts in Springfield over the future of the RTA. "I want them to hurry up or I'm going to have to buy a bus company!" Behrel said.

Arlington Heights Mayor Jack Walsh was a candidate for one of the two Cook County seats on the RTA, but he said he thinks very highly of Tecson. He said he is not very familiar with Baldino.

FORMER ELK GROVE Village Pres. Jack Pahl, now vice president of the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission, said, "I think they'll both do a good job representing the suburban community. The mayor (Daley) showed good judgment (in his appointments) and I think the county board showed good judgment."

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, a fierce opponent of the RTA referendum bill, said of the two men, "Joe Tecson and Dan Baldino are two nice persons," but preferred not to comment further on them.

Baldino, 32, threatened to become a maverick at the Republican slating in the fall because he didn't get a position as county commissioner.

Potential disaster legislation to be filed

Atty. Gen. William Scott and Sen. James Bell, R-Joliet, said they plan to introduce legislation designed to cope with potential disasters like last weekend's chemical leak on Chicago's South Side. The bill would require manufacturers, processors or transporters of dangerous chemicals to file pertinent information with the state Environmental Protection Agency. It would also require filing of antidotes and emergency procedures in case of spillage of dangerous substances.

Stock prices up slightly

Bargain hunters brushed aside Watergate developments and more interest rate rises, sending stocks slightly higher in light trading on the New York Stock Exchange. The Dow Jones average gained 1.33 to 938.75. Standard & Poor's index was ahead 0.31 to 90.31. Advances outnumbered declines, 700 to 647, among 1,786 stocks traded. Sales totaled 10,960,000 shares, compared with the previous session's 10,170,000 shares.

Transcripts delivered—what next?

TRANSCRIPTS OF edited versions of many of President Nixon's Watergate conversations arrive on Capitol Hill to be turned over to the House Judiciary Committee. The documents then went to the old Congressional Hotel, taken over by the committee staff for the impeachment inquiry.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republicans on the House Judiciary Committee Tuesday accepted with some misgivings President Nixon's decision to furnish only the transcripts of subpoenaed Watergate tapes, but they were ready to battle any Democratic attempt to reject the offer.

Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., declined television network offers for equal time to respond to Nixon's Monday night speech. An aide said Rodino did not want to participate in a political game and House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., said it would not be a good idea for him to accept it.

Soon after delivery of the transcripts from the White House, committee Democrats scheduled a caucus to discuss their possible recourse to what they considered less than full compliance with the committee subpoena.

Democrats generally spoke harshly of the Nixon offer — calling the transcripts a "mish-mash" and a "cover-up" — but they appeared to have reached no consensus on what to do about it. Republicans seemed to want to accept the transcripts and drop the issue.

The station wagon-load of transcripts was delivered to the impeachment inquiry headquarters one-half hour before the 10 a.m. EDT deadline stipulated in the subpoena, which demanded tape recordings of 42 conversations.

Telegrams poured into the Capitol offices of most of the 36 committee members, most of the messages opposed to the President's position. But Nixon got some strong support from Republicans in both Houses, including the endorsement of Sen. Barry M. Goldwater of Arizona.

Many committee Republicans said they would have preferred that Nixon include John M. Deaver and Albert Jenner, the chief impeachment counsels, in the listening operation, if not actual delivery of the tapes to the full committee. But they appeared weary of the wrangling and ready to accept the transcripts alone.

The edited transcripts were accompanied by a White House statement saying they prove he had "no knowledge" of the bugging or its cover-up and that John W. Dean III is the real culprit.

But perhaps the most crucial of those transcripts showed that Nixon 13 months ago rejected granting clemency to bugging conspirator E. Howard Hunt Jr. as politically impossible but sounded out Dean about meeting Hunt's demands for hush money "damn soon."

White House sources declined to say whether Nixon would comply with a subpoena from Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski for 64 taped Watergate conversations by a court-set Thursday deadline.

With spectacular earnings reports coming in from three more oil companies, the House Ways and Means Committee Tuesday passed legislation that would cost the companies billions of dollars in new taxes.

Atlantic Richfield, Phillips Petroleum and Cities Service joined the parade of oil companies reporting sharply improved profits for the first quarter with Phillips leading the way with a 150 per cent gain over last year's first quarter. Net income was $108.6 million for the quarter.

Cities Service and Atlantic Richfield both reported earnings increases of 87 per cent. Cities Service on profits of $68.8 million, and Atlantic Richfield of $33.9 million.

The ways and means committee — on a 14-5 vote — approved a tax package that would phase out the controversial oil depletion allowance over three years, and establish a temporary "windfall profits tax."

It is estimated the bill, if approved in its present form, would produce an additional $13 billion to $14 billion in additional tax revenue from the oil industry in the next five years alone.

The legislation is expected to pass the House easily and go to the Senate, probably in about two weeks.

The depletion allowance permits an oil company to deduct a percentage of its taxable income up to 50 per cent of profits. Critics say that's a loophole; the companies say they need it as an incentive for new exploration.

The windfall provision would be a graduated tax on any crude oil prices above $4.50 a barrel, with the base to rise until gradually the tax disappeared.

Meantime, the American Automobile Association — in its weekly Fuel Gauge Report — said the number of gas stations staying open weekends is gradually increasing, while the number limiting purchases continues to decrease.

Dems push for restraints on industry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A handful of Democratic senators pushed Tuesday for standby wage-price controls giving President Nixon authority to clamp new restraints on industries where inflation proved toughest to lick.

The last-ditch effort to keep controls alive was led by Sens. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, and J. Bennett Johnston Jr., D-La.

The controls were to expire last night.

But other influential Democrats argued that after 32 months of on-again, off-again freezes and controls, it was time to kill the stabilization experiment once and for all.

Administration officials were worried that congressional debate over renewed controls in the weeks ahead could ignite a new round of wage and price hikes, making an already explosive inflationary problem even worse.

Meanwhile, prices for raw farm products, slumping for the second straight month, declined another 6 per cent in the month ending April 15 to foreshadow a probable slowdown in food inflation for consumers.

The Agriculture Department's monthly farm price report said Tuesday that the April decline, which followed a 4 per cent drop in March, was due largely to falling prices for wheat, hogs, cattle, corn, soy beans and eggs.

The decline left prices 17 per cent above a year earlier, but they were more than 8 per cent below last January and about 12 per cent below the record set last August.

In other developments, the House Ways and Means Committee Tuesday began considering general tax reform, setting out a major agenda ranging from tax treatment of political parties to property tax relief for the elderly.

Among other major areas the committee plans to consider are tax treatment of single persons and married couples.

Israel-Syria battling in its 50th day

From United Press International
Israel said its warplanes scored "good hits" Tuesday on Syrian positions on Mount Hermon, including missile batteries, while ground forces traded artillery and tank fire in the 50th consecutive day of fighting on the Golan Heights.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger arrived in Egypt on his latest — and admittedly toughest — peace-seeking mission.

Kissinger flew to Alexandria from Algiers where he won support from President Houari Boumedienne for his efforts to promote a military disengagement agreement between Israel and Syria and put an end to the fighting which could plunge the Middle East into another full-scale war. Boumedienne has been one of the toughest of the Arab hardliners and his endorsement could play a major role in Kissinger's talks in Damascus.

The Soviet Union already had pledged to use its influence with Syrian President Hafez Assad and Kissinger is seeking similar backing from Egyptian President Anwar Sadat before he buckles down to the task of getting Damascus and Jerusalem to agree to separate their military forces.

A high official aboard Kissinger's plane said that since Kissinger is going to Israel first he hoped Israel would make the first move to break the impasse with Syria — since it is Israel which is occupying Syrian territory captured in the 1967 and last October's wars.

In Tel Aviv, a military spokesman said all Israeli planes returned safely to base Tuesday after intermittent runs over the Mount Hermon region that spanned 30 minutes. The armed forces radio said "Good hits" were reported on "Syrian tank concentrations, artillery and missile batteries." The command reported one soldier wounded by Syrian shellfire elsewhere along the front.

From Herald news service

One of Amtrak's main Chicago-to-Florida trains, the "The Floridian," derailed Tuesday just northwest of the northern Indiana town of Winsamac.

Twenty-seven persons were reported injured, and sent to Pulaski Memorial Hospital for treatment. None was hurt seriously, and all 27 were released after treatment. Six of the injured were from Chicago, none from this suburban area.

Virtually all of the 122 persons aboard the train — including 103 passengers — were reported shaken up in the derailment, which left only the lead locomotive and rear mail car standing on the tracks. Two other locomotives and 14 cars were reported on the ground, "upright but leaning."

The train, which was on its return to Chicago from Miami, went off the tracks at 10:55 a.m. The trip to Chicago was to be completed by buses sent by Amtrak from Logansport.

Simon confirmed as Treasury secretary

• One of the least controversial major appointments of the Nixon administration got swift approval Tuesday, as the Senate — by voice vote with no debate — confirmed William E. Simon as secretary of the Treasury. The former head of the Federal Energy Office will succeed George Shultz, who quit to return to private life. Simon — who described himself as a "financial conservative" — will not carry Shultz' other title of counselor to the president, and thus will wield less power over the economy.

• As might be expected, the discovery of an East German spy among the aides of West German Chancellor Willy Brandt will put a strain on relations between the two German states. Brandt gave that message to his cabinet Tuesday, in reviewing the scandal that broke last week when police arrested Gueuther Gulllaume on the espionage charge.

• Agnes Moorehead, 67, best known to modern audiences for her characterization of a sharp-tongued, sarcastic witch in the TV series "Bewitched" died yesterday in Methodist Hospital in Roches, Minn. where she was under the care of Mayo Clinic doctors. She was twice nominated for the Academy Award, in 1942 for "The Magnificent Ambersons," and in 1948 for her role in "Johnny Belinda." Miss Moorehead, born Dec. 6, 1906 in Boston, Mass., was the daughter of a Presbyterian minister.

• Though you may not have known it, Tuesday passed as the first National Day for Humiliation, Fasting and Prayer, to acknowledge dependence on God and to "repent of our national sins." The observance was spearheaded by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., who quietly got it through the Senate last December and had it endorsed by more than 30 governors. The House refused to go along after Rep. Ken Hechler, D-W. Va., said too many "silly and senseless" resolutions are brought before Congress.

Changes in RTA bill could save it

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Suburban spokesmen said Tuesday outlying counties would probably vote to stay in the fledgling Regional Transit Authority if the characteristics they don't like are corrected.

The theme surfaced frequently as the Illinois House, sitting as a committee of the whole, weighed House Speaker W. Robert Blair's proposed changes in the RTA.

Blair's so-called disconnect bill, which would enable county boards in the district to opt out of the RTA, automatically went to the second reading or amendment stage.

Blair was the first to contend that his proposed amendments would not necessarily cripple or kill the RTA, as many argue.

BESIDES THE opt-out provision, Blair would increase suburban representation, spend money where it's raised, limit the authority's power to seize park land and bar fare hikes until July 1, 1975, by carriers taken over by the RTA.

Ronald Coles, chairman of the Lake County Board, said, "If you fix up the RTA, adopt some reasonable amendments, Lake County is not going to opt out and run."

Ron Wilson of Crystal Lake, president of the Involved Citizens Assn. of

W. ROBERT BLAIR

McHenry County, said, "If you give us what we want and what we need, we will not opt out."

However, said Wilson, as long as suburbanites feel "Chicago politicians have their sticky fingers in our coffers," the RTA will be unpopular in Kane, Lake, Will, DuPage and McHenry counties.

The RTA was approved by less than 13,000 votes at the March 19 primary. Opposition to the authority was overwhelming in suburban Cook County and the five outlying counties, but passed because of the turnout in Chicago.

House rebuffs Blair on RTA ruling

by BOB LAHEY

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — The fate of the Metropolitan Regional Transportation Authority remained uncertain Tuesday after hours of parliamentary haggling in the Illinois House of Representatives.

Tuesday's session was marked by what may be an unprecedented rebuff to the speaker of the house, W. Robert Blair.

The House convened early Tuesday morning as a committee-of-the-whole to hear testimony on a proposal by Blair that many believe would lead to the dissolution of the RTA approved by voters in the March 19 election.

NO ACTION WAS taken by the committee, and the house is expected to vote on Blair's proposals next week. Before testimony began Tuesday, the parliamentary maneuvering produced an appeal by State Rep. Harold A. Katz, D-Glenview, of a ruling by Blair that only his RTA proposal was eligible for consideration under current rules of the House.

Katz appealed to the House membership for a vote supporting his contention that exclusion of bills introduced by other representatives while he admitted the speaker's bill was a frustration of the legislative process.

Rep. William Walsh, R-LaGrange Park, who had taken over as acting speaker, attempted to send off Katz' appeal by ruling it would require a constitutional majority of 89 votes rather than a simple majority of the 148 House members present.

Katz' appeal, however, attracted a solid 100 votes, a sound rebuke to Blair. One veteran legislator who has served in the House since 1946 said he could not recall a ruling by the speaker ever having been overturned by the membership.

While the success of the Katz motion had no binding effect on Blair or the House of Representatives, Katz said Tuesday he believed it would induce Blair to allow Katz's alternative legislation on RTA to be brought before the committee of the whole.

BLAIR IS SEEKING legislation that would allow the five "collar counties" in Northeastern Illinois and suburban Cook County to detach themselves from the RTA. Although an original sponsor of the bill approved in referendum, he drafted the current legislation after voters in his district went against the RTA proposal by a nine to one margin.

Counts by various legislators Tuesday indicated that Blair is approximately 15 votes short of passage of his legislation in the House. The consensus is that his legislation would face even greater opposition in the Senate.

Chambers of Commerce vote to form an association

by TONI GINETTI

Local chambers of commerce in the Northwest suburbs have voted to form a Northwest Suburban Chamber of Commerce Assn.

The association, which has been discussed by the local groups since September, will attempt to act as a voice for business and industry in the area. The group may also serve as a lobby in legislative matters dealing with business and industry in the suburbs.

The association Tuesday elected Harry O'Brien, director of the Rolling Meadows Chamber, to head the association. Elected as vice president was Stanley Klyber, of the Elk Grove Assn. of Industry and Commerce; treasurer, Bud Patz, of the Bensenville Chamber; and secretary, Marge Alt, of the Rolling Meadows Chamber.

Committees for the group have also been established. Earl Johnson, executive manager of the Arlington Heights Chamber will head the membership committee; Clarence Schlaver of the Mount Prospect Chamber will serve as publicity chairman and Marlon Bauer of the Palatine Chamber will head the special events committee.

O'Brien has been a main force behind organization of the chamber group. He has served as Rolling Meadows Chamber director since June, 1973. Prior to that he had been a district manager for the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce.

O'BRIEN HAS SAID the chamber association may become involved in several projects soon, including extending the limits of the Chicago Trucking Zone to the suburban area. The zone encompasses metropolitan Chicago and a 10-mile radius of the city. In those limits special trucking and freight rates are charged for deliveries to businesses and industries. Rates for deliveries to suburban businesses are substantially higher.

The formation of the association was first discussed last fall among representatives of the Elk Grove, Arlington Heights, Palatine, Wheeling, Mount Prospect, Barrington, Itasca, Bensenville, Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates, Des Plaines, Schaumburg and Rolling Meadows chambers.

The group has drafted bylaws that will be reviewed by local chambers prior to their formal adoption, O'Brien said. The association plans to meet June 18 in Des Plaines.

Most area chamber officials had expressed support for the concept of the association. Johnson said Tuesday he was enthusiastic about the group. "I think that this is a very natural kind of progression," he said.

Flo Calahan will direct the show with choreography staged by Pat Kopp and LaDonna Stonerook assisting with dramatics.

case where Bieber is co-defendant.

Indictments against Stavros, Bieber, Valenza and three other former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials were returned Jan. 31, following a year-long federal probe.

The prosecution in the Stavros case was handled by Kadison and Howard Stone, assistant U. S. attorneys working under U. S. Atty. James R. Thompson's special investigations division. The investigation was handled by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the intelligence division of the Internal Revenue Service.

4 sump pumps taken

Four sump pumps were stolen recently from the basement of buildings under construction at the Crossings development, Ill. Rtes. 83 and 53 in Buffalo Grove.

Police said the pumps, valued at $400, were stolen either Friday or Saturday. There was a report of an unfamiliar vehicle at the development Friday night.

Suburbs urged to define goals

Northwest suburban business and community leaders must begin immediately to define "suburban goals" and a "suburban strategy" if they are to have a voice in their future, a national political researcher said Tuesday.

Speaking before representatives of local chambers of commerce at the Greenhouse Restaurant in Palatine, Lawrence K. Brainard of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States said there is no common voice speaking in behalf of the 2 million persons living in the suburban Chicago area. Because of that, downstate and Chicago leaders are deciding questions directly affecting the suburbs.

"Without the development of some kind of suburban strategy, the suburban voters will continue to think in terms of the old rural or urban ties without seeing what is best for the suburbs as a unit," Brainard warned. "This kind of splintering will just keep them apart."

BRAINARD, a political and legislative affairs researcher for the U.S. Chamber association and a lobbyist for 35 congressional districts in Illinois and Indiana, said economic growth in the Northwest suburbs in the past decade has made the area "the new economic base of the city of Chicago."

Population in the area in the past 10 years has doubled, he added, but there has been no development of a "suburban conscience."

Suburban officials have remained fragmented and have not worked together effectively for the area good, he said. He said an example of the problem is the suburban opposition to the Regional Transportation Authority, which he said many officials and suburban residents have opposed because they fear it may bring blacks and other minorities to the area.

SEVERAL CHAMBER representatives disputed Brainard, saying the opposition to RTA was based on feelings that the bill did not offer help for the suburbs. But Brainard said the lack of a suburban voice to guide the preparation of the RTA bill resulted in rural downstate leaders and Chicago leaders drafting a bill suited to them. Suburban voters then responded in the only way they knew how, a "no" vote, he said.

Brainard called on the chamber representatives to hold a series of conferences to outline what he called "suburban goals" and then to act as a lobbying group for suburban interests in the state legislature.

The areas they will need to focus on will include continued economic growth, autonomy from Chicago and improved transportation to and from other suburbs and places where suburbanites work, Brainard said. He said businessmen and municipal governments need to recognize the area's needs, eliminate duplication of services and units to influence decisions being made for the area.

Little League season to start Saturday

The flag dedication will include the raising of three flags — the village flag, American flag, and a newly designed Little League flag. The ceremony will take place on the ball diamonds behind

St. Joseph the Worker Church, 181 W. Dundee Rd.

Following the flag dedication, the Little League members will be driven through town in uniform to formally announce the beginning of the season. The parade and flag dedication are sponsored by the Wheeling Athletic Assn., which oversees village Little League activities.

'An extension of the classroom' at Whitman School

Learning center—hub of knowledge

by JILL BETTNER

Seated at a table, an intense fifth-grade boy assembles intricate parts of a model computer. Nearby, a girl charts the growth of plants she's raising from seed. A group in one corner chat animatedly as they work on floor plans for 21st century homes.

All these activities and more are going on simultaneously in the library-learning center at Whitman School, Dist. 21, Wheeling.

Each of the 17 schools in the district has a center similar to the one at Whitman, a place where children are free to satisfy appetites for learning whetted by classroom instruction. Dist. 21 serves Buffalo Grove, Wheeling and portions of Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights.

"I look on the learning center as an extension of the classroom," said Whitman principal Jack Cushman. "It's a center for a variety of learning experiences."

THE LIBRARY-learning center has replaced the somewhat austere school library where students were required to sit in hard-backed chairs and maintain scholarly silence.

The large, interesting center was created last summer as part of an extensive remodeling program at Whitman, the oldest school in the district. The room is carpeted and furnished with both big and small tables covered with ceiling hang mobiles of spinning fish, fashioned as part of the recent deep sea exploration by children interested in the underwater world.

In one corner, large, comfortable chairs are grouped for relaxing with a book or small group discussions.

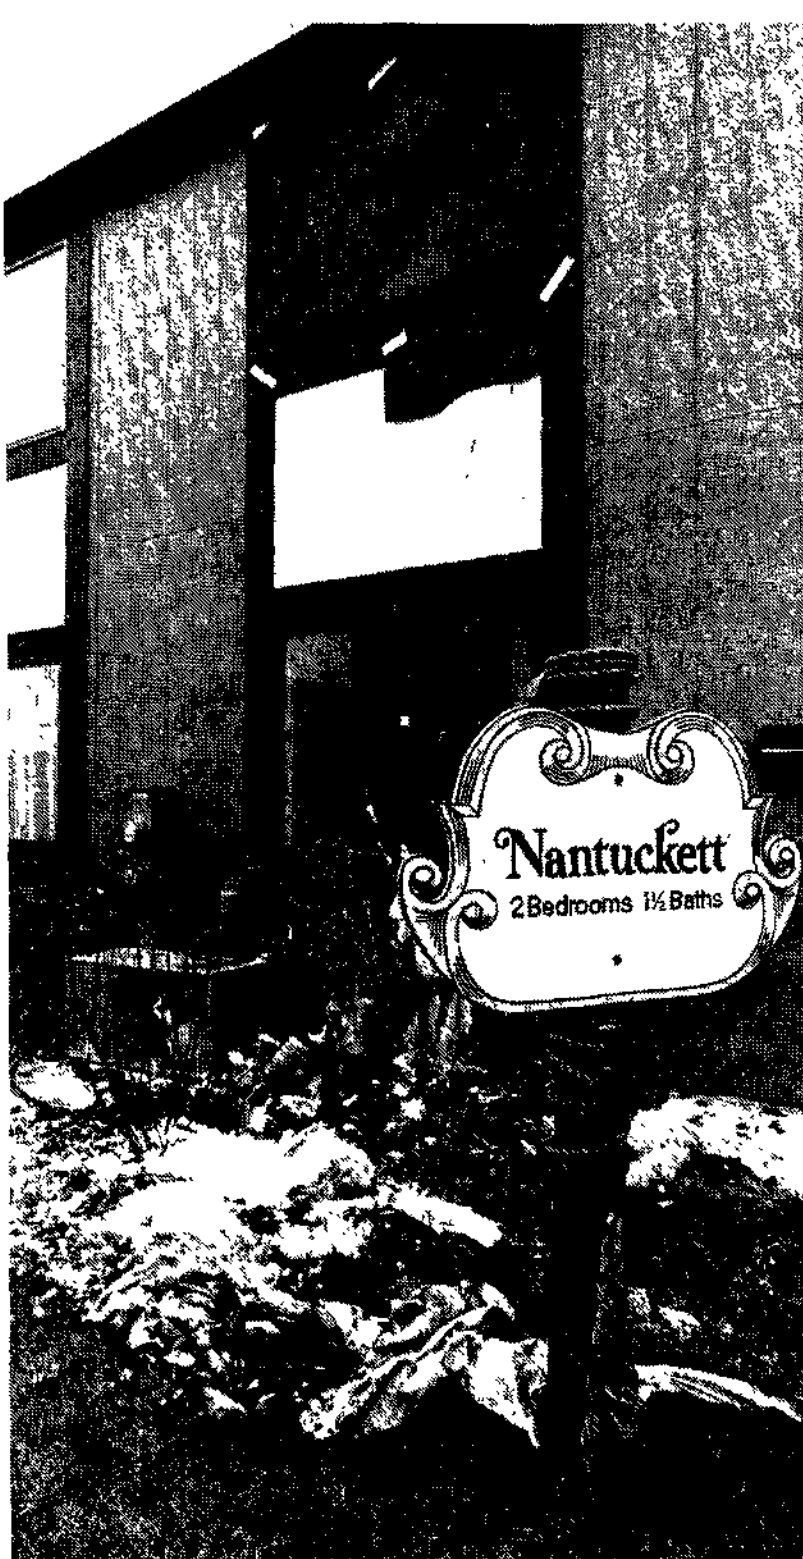

MOST OF THE children talk to each other while they work, but the noise level is minimal.

"It's an informal atmosphere, but it's carefully guided," Cushman said. "The kids are busy and it's natural for them to want to talk about what they're doing. You might call it an active learning atmosphere."

A lot of the activity in the learning center at Whitman is initiated by Greta Gilchrist, learning center director. Her job is to provide the stimuli to allow children to turn their natural interest into an educational experience.

All students in kindergarten through the sixth grade spend at least one hour per week in the learning center, usually in groups of about 15 children each. It is time when the kids can pursue hobbies, interests and research of their own choosing.

AT THE BEGINNING of the year,

FIRE OF suspicious origin caused an estimated $3,000 damage Monday at this Chelsea Cove model townhouse on Barnaby Lane in Wheeling. Officials are probing this fire and three others since late March.

$6,000 raised for new medic van

"We Care" month in Wheeling ended Tuesday with about $6,000 raised towards the purchase of a new paramedic van for the village.

Trustee William Hein, organizer of the "We Care" program, said the total is expected to increase substantially once fund-raising canisters from local stores and industries are returned. In addition, a baseball game Sunday between the Wheeling Jaycees and Lions Club is expected to produce more money for the paramedic program.

The fund-raising drive began April 1 in an effort to collect $10,000 to purchase a second paramedic unit for Wheeling. Since that time, various civic organizations have been manning the street corners and going door-to-door selling "We Care" buttons and seeking donations.

"We got a very good response from the service organizations," Hein said of the program. "And the people have been very receptive. The residents have been just great."

ALMOST ALL of the 5,000 "We Care" buttons have been sold at $1 apiece. Hein said. He said the few buttons left will probably be gone by the time the fund-raising effort ends this week.

The village paramedic program is scheduled to begin as soon as the final pieces of emergency equipment are delivered to the fire department. The equipment will be housed in the old village ambulance until the ordered paramedic van arrives later this spring.

Funds raised through the "We Care" program will be used to purchase a second paramedic unit which will serve as a back-up in case of emergencies. The original unit is being financed with federal revenue-sharing funds.

Hein said the "We Care" program will officially come to an end this week. He said, however, he expects contributions to continue trickling in for the next few weeks.

Teacher, board team continue pact talks

No agreement was reached Monday between bargaining teams for the Dist. 21 school board and the Wheeling Faculty Council on the 1974-75 teacher contract.

The meeting was the fourth in three months. Because the negotiations are closed to the public, details of the contract under discussion are unknown as well as the stage of the talks.

Another bargaining session is scheduled for 4 p.m. Monday at the Dist. 21 administration building, 999 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

Junior ROTC drill meet Saturday at Wheeling

The Naval Junior ROTC unit of Wheeling High School will host the fifth annual Chicago Suburban Junior ROTC Drill Meet Saturday.

Opening ceremonies are scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. in the Wheeling High School gym, 900 S. Elmhurst Rd. Honors will be presented to Rear Admiral Warren O'Neil, U. S. Navy, who will serve as reviewing officer.

Drill teams representing Army, Navy and Air Force units from area high schools will compete in the drill meet. Among units participating will be a team from Gary West Side High School, recent winner of the High School Division in competition at Western Kentucky University and Guilford High School, Rockford, recent winner of competition at St. John's Military Academy.

Also participating will be outstanding units from Gary, Ind., including Emerson High School, winner of the city trophy and Gary Roosevelt High School.

THE WHEELING High School Spur-ettes will perform along with girls' teams from Rockford, Jefferson and Guilford High Schools.

Trophies will be presented to the winning teams by Admiral O'Neil. Awards will also be given to the outstanding team commander and to individuals felt to be exceptionally proficient in military drill.

Tickets for the drill meet are available from all Wheeling Naval Junior ROTC cadets and will be on sale at the door at $1 for adults and 50 cents for students. Children under six will be admitted free.

Library board to reinstall officers

The Prospect Heights Public Library Board will reinstall its three newly elected members and will choose officers at a special meeting at 7:30 tonight in the library, 12 N. Elm St., Prospect Heights.

The elected trustees, all of whom were incumbents, are Mrs. Carroll Hardebeck, 209 E. Marion Ave.; Anthony Gaddini, 405 Na-Wa-Ta Pl., and Mrs. George Kusch, 303 E. Olive St.

Two of four area hospitals plan to increase rates

by KAREN BLECHA

Two of four Northwest suburban hospitals are planning to raise their rates now that federal price controls over the health-care industry have expired.

Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village is planning a rate hike of about 7 per cent, July 1. Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights expects to raise its prices by about 3 to 4 per cent, although no date has been set. The hospital has already announced it will increase employees' salaries by 4.1 per cent now that the freeze is over.

Officials from both hospitals stressed they are raising prices to meet rising costs, not just because today is the first time in 2½ years hospitals have been free of government price regulation. The federal wage and price controls expired at midnight last night.

Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines and Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge are planning no increases, but administrators said hikes could come in the future if inflation continues to rise.

Members of the Nixon administration predicted that as soon as controls were lifted, hospital prices would skyrocket as high as the market would bear. Late Tuesday some senators were still pushing for standby control to give the President authority to clamp new restraints on industries whose prices raged out of control.

RICHARD HARRELL, vice president in charge of finance at Alexian Brothers, said the hospital would raise its rates, controls or not. He said, however, that he didn't know if the increase could be as high as 7 per cent if controls were reinstated.

"Our decision is somewhat related to the expiration of controls, but not entirely," he said. "We have analyzed our costs and we see a need to increase rates. If we had geared the increase to the end of controls, we would have made it May 1."

Harrell said the increase would affect a variety of hospital services, but primarily room rates. The rate for a semi-private room will rise from $69 to $69 a day, an approximate 17 per cent increase, Harrell said, however, the overall average increase is 7 per cent.

The last time Alexian Brothers raised its rates was Jan. 1, when increases totaled about 5 per cent. Harrell said the new increases are "adequate" to meet rising costs.

SALARY INCREASES at Northwest Community Hospital will be in the first May paycheck, said administrator Malcolm MacCoun.

"We had given our employees a 5.5 per cent raise under the controls last November, and the cost of living has risen 9.6 per cent. We want to give them this 4.1 per cent increase so they don't lose any purchasing power."

MacCoun said when the hospital raises its rates "sometime in the next month or so" room rates and operating room charges will go up. Besides giving employees a raise, the hospital is also adding personnel, he said.

Sister M. Amata, administrator at Holy Family, said hospital officials want to see how high future prices will go before raising their rates.

"We know our employees will have to have raises but we don't know how much," she said. "We have to see how much our costs will go up before we make up our minds on an increase."

Sister Amata said the hospital Monday raised the emergency room fee by $5, which was allowed under the controls.

T. L. JACOBSEN, executive vice president of Lutheran General, said hospital officials have not talked about a rate increase at all.

"Our budget year ends July 1 and we'll probably talk about it then," he said. "We will probably have some increase. We haven't changed our rates for a year."

The Northwest suburban hospitals joined the Illinois, Catholic, and the American Protestant hospital associations in protesting Phase IV controls over the health-care industry. Hospital officials said the controls were unfair because hospital suppliers were not regulated and hospitals had to absorb rising costs of drugs, food and even linens.

Branch banking enthusiasts optimistic

by LEA TONKIN

There's no question in Jim Lancaster's mind about the need for change in Illinois banking laws which prohibit banks from opening branch offices.

Lancaster, president of the Bank of Elk Grove in Elk Grove Village, is among the branching enthusiasts who participated in the first annual meeting of the Assn. for Modern Banking in Illinois this week. The two-day gathering ended Tuesday, following discussion of branch operations and the economy.

"Branching is here already," said Lancaster. While Illinois remains the only major industrial state in the U.S. which prohibits bank branching, bank groups and chains have sprouted up as an alternative means of sharing expertise and costs. Lancaster's own bank is a member of a group which includes Marina City Bank, LaSalle National Bank, Woodfield Bank in Schaumburg, First National Bank of Highland Park and a Hyde Park bank.

The importance to bank customers of the branch concept is largely in terms of convenience, Lancaster explained. Local facilities or branches could be established to serve customer needs within a given county, in contrast to the current unit bank system. Streamlined service and economy could be achieved through shared expenses for computer services, advertising and product promotions and portfolio management. Decentralized decision-making power would enable bank branch managers to pool lending powers when they feel it is in the best interests of the local operation, he said.

"THE PEOPLE IN Illinois are being shortchanged of convenience," said Lancaster of the anti-branching situation in the state. AMBI is urging all bankers and legislators to move toward change "instead of staying in a cocoon and refusing to modify their behavior," he said. Henry Seyfarth, chairman of AMBI, said at the Oak Brook convention he expects the Illinois General Assembly to change Illinois' anti-branching laws in 1975. "All of us are of the opinion that events have broken in our favor," he said.

During the 1973 legislative session, State Sen. Phillip Rock, D-Chicago, introduced two bills for AMBI. One would permit branch banking operations within a bank's home county or within 20 miles of the home base. Another bill would allow banks to hold or own other banks. Neither bill made it out of committee.

PRESSURE FOR branching legislation includes increased competition for customers by savings and loan associations and other financial institutions. The federally chartered savings and loans are allowed to set up branch facilities in Illinois.

Although AMBI was formed following the Illinois Bankers Assn.'s overwhelming rejection of a branch banking proposal in May, 1973, Seyfarth and other officers contend they are willing to discuss issues with the IBA. The IBA has 978 member banks, almost four times as many as in AMBI. AMBI claims that its membership represents 75 per cent of all bank assets in the state.

George Morvis, secretary of the IBA, said its president, James Ghiglieri, will present his own version of a branch banking proposal at the association's May 19-21 convention in Peoria. A resolutions committee will also present a proposal that the IBA consider a "plan for possible structure change." The plan would be voted upon by IBA before the end of 1974.

Goodbye auto graveyards; hello to scrap mini-mills

by LeROY POPE

NEW YORK — The automobile graveyard, a dismal feature of the American landscape for nearly 40 years, is fast disappearing.

The new electric furnace process of making steel in smaller mills uses virtually all scrap as the raw material, and junked cars make the best scrap.

As recently as 10 years ago, automobile cemeteries were growing in the United States and many other countries. The cost of transporting and recycling junked cars exceeded the value of the metal that could be extracted from them.

In some European countries short of land it even became fashionable to load junked automobiles on ships and dump them in the sea. This aroused protests from fishermen and ecologists who said the corroding metal polluted the ocean.

BUT DEVELOPMENT of the mini-mill, which makes a few kinds of steel to serve the needs of local markets, changed everything. These little mills are computer controlled. The computer is programmed to give the mill manager an accurate analysis of the scrap content in the automobiles, refrigerators and other junked steel objects he melts down. The computer also tells him how much pure metallic alloys he must add to get the kinds of new steel he wants.

According to Ogden Corporation's Luria Bros. subsidiary, perhaps the nation's biggest scrap dealer, the electric furnace sector of the industry, spurred by the rise of the mini-mill, produced 18.2 per cent of the nation's steel last year. It is expected to produce at least 25 per cent by 1980.

While the mini-mills use all scrap as raw material, larger electric furnace mills use combinations of scrap and new iron ore. Mills using the basic oxygen process, which made about 35 per cent of the steel output last year, use only 25 per cent scrap and 75 per cent new ore. The old-fashioned open hearth mills, which still make around 27 per cent of the steel, use half scrap and half ore.

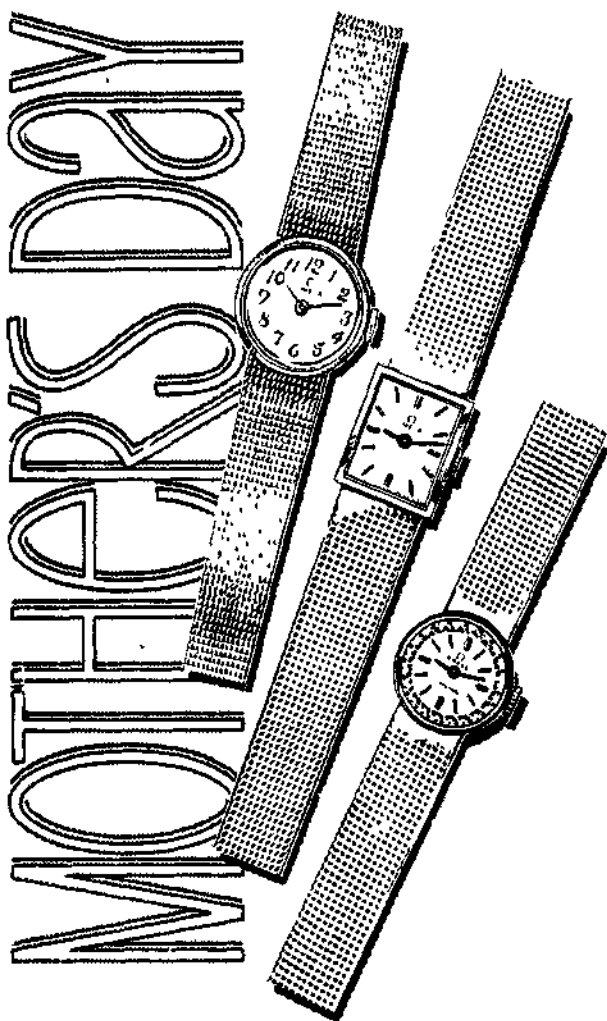

THE PRICE OF steel scrap went sky-high as the mini-mills and other electric furnace steelmaking expanded in recent years. But within the past few weeks, the scrap price has broken by $4 to $16 a ton in the important Philadelphia and Chicago markets. A small drop in the nation's overall steel output probably caused the fall in scrap prices. A spokesman for Ogden's Luria Division said he thought the break in scrap prices may be of national importance, considering the tightness of U.S. supplies of domestic and imported iron ore. It means, he said, that making steel largely from scrap will be considerably more economical.

Since the metallic analysis of junked cars is fairly uniform and easily obtained from manufacturers, they are about the biggest source of easily recycled scrap.

Hospital to add to 'high-risk' facilities

Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge will more than double the size of its high-risk nursery, the only one in the Northwest suburbs.

With a $250,000 expansion, the nursery will be able to care for 16 to 20 premature and critically ill infants. The money will also pay for more respirators, isolettes and other life-supporting equipment.

"The need for high-risk nursery care has developed very rapidly," said Dr. Henry Mangurten, neonatologist and director of the high-risk nursery. "In our new facility, we will be able to provide care for the increasing number of infants that are referred to us for high-risk services."

Critically ill babies are transferred to Lutheran General from other suburban hospitals. The high-risk nursery staff includes two full time neonatologists (physicians specializing in the care of newborn infants with medical problems) and 17 nurses.

"We want babies to leave the hospital with good potential," said Mangurten. "In a high-risk facility we give very small or very sick infants a better chance for the future."

In a recent 10-day period, the nursery handled four infants ranging in size from 1 pound .13 ounces to 2 pounds 3 ounces who were from 12 to 15 weeks premature. All have survived.

Besides premature infants, babies with respiratory problems, abnormalities of body chemicals, nutritional or birth defects are admitted to the problems, surgical problems and other high-risk nursery.

Proper elevation for hiatal hernia

My husband and I were very grateful for the discussion of hiatal hernia in our newspaper. My husband had this, and we elevate the bed eight inches.

We are both 65. I'm an R.N. and have had three children, and have the usual hemorrhoid and varicose vein problems from being on my feet all my life. I'm concerned about the eight-inch elevation of the head of the bed continuously. Will this be harmful to our circulation? Should pillows used at troublesome times for elevation be better and sufficient help?

Pillows just won't do for elevation of the head in hiatal hernia. Too often they will only raise the upper chest, actually bending the chest over the abdomen. This compresses the abdominal cavity and the increased pressure tends to push the hernia through the diaphragm. If anything, the back should be arched and the chest held up to create as little compression of the abdominal contents as possible. You can see that pillows could even make matters worse.

The upright position does increase pressure in the veins below the heart which does affect hemorrhoids and varicose veins. The effect is proportional to the increased pressure from the body's position. An eight-inch elevation will not have the same degree of effect as you get from being upright. I guess if you wanted a comparison, that small amount of elevation is more like being on the moon with one-sixth the force of gravity as compared to standing on earth. The minimal increase in pressure then will not greatly influence varicose veins or hemorrhoids.

Of course, if you were really worried about it, you might use twin beds. Elevate your husband's bed and leave yours flat.

I am a 16-year-old junior. Recently while playing basketball in gym, I felt something happen in my head. I went up for a rebound and when I came down I felt a kink in the left back part of my head. A second after that happened I felt a burning sensation start at the area of the kink. The burning sensation began to spread throughout most of the left side of my head. Although my head felt a little funny for about one-and-a-half hours after it happened, since that time I have felt O.K. What was it that happened, and do you feel that it is necessary to see a doctor?

You probably turned your head as you went up for the rebound and part of the muscle at the back of the neck when into spasm or a cramp. Many people produce the same cramp reaction by contracting the calf muscle tightly and holding it contracted for a little while. The crampped neck muscle will cause the type of sensation you describe. As the cramp wears off the sensation goes away. As long as you don't have a stiff neck and have good movement of your head without pain, I would guess you will be just fine.

Television notes

'Pursuit of Youth' on NBC

THE RECENT rock concert called "California Jam" held in Ontario, Calif., was taped, and the results will make up four of ABC's "In Concert" programs to be aired May 10 and 24 and June 7 and 21. "California Jam" was the first live concert sponsored by ABC Entertainment.

NBC NEWS has a May 30 one-hour special about today's preoccupation with keeping up the appearance of youth at all levels. "The Pursuit of Youth" will explore the economic and psychological reasons behind this.

ACTOR JAMES WHITMORE has been doing a one-man show in concert in which he impersonates the late Will Rogers and uses as text selections from Rogers' writings. CBS will present a special television version of "Will Rogers' U.S.A." in a one-hour program June 9. Whitmore begins a four-week engagement in his "show" at Broadway's Helen Hayes Theater on May 6.

ABC SPORTS will increase the regular season telecasts of National Football League games on its "NFL Monday Night Football" program to 14 next fall. Preseason telecasts will be raised to five, and the network also will telecast the annual Pro Bowl game between stars of the NFL's National Football Conference and the American Football Conference.

HAL HOLBROOK, whose fine acting career has featured his impersonation of Mark Twain in a one-man show, will be Abraham Lincoln in six one-hour drama specials on NBC. The dramas are drawn from Carl Sandburg's notable Lincoln biography, and the over-all title of the series will be "Sandburg's Lincoln." The specials are linked to the forthcoming American Bicentennial, and three will be broadcast during the 1974-75 season and three in 1975-76.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Count to nine before losing

"Well," said North philosophically, "If you are going to overbid you should learn to play the cards better."

"What could I do?" asked South.

"Practice counting to nine," replied North.

South's three notrump was really an overbid. If he had just bid two notrump North would have taken him on to game. After all you don't need much of a hand to reopen when the bidding has died at one heart.

Now let's see what North meant by South being unable to count to nine.

If you win nine tricks at a three notrump contract the sun shines and everyone is happy. At least you and your partner are.

East held back his king of hearts at trick one and dummy's queen won the trick.

East's play was unusual but mighty good. It gave South a chance to go wrong and South did.

South would have been sure of his contract if he had just put his ace of hearts on dummy's queen. His next play would be to overtake his king of clubs with dummy's ace. He would continue to play clubs until East's queen was forced out. Later on he would get to dummy with the Village should aid family

Consider the plight of Louis Frederick, his wife and two children who just bought a new house and then discovered it doesn't have a sewer.

Oh, it's got a sewer of sorts, in that a pipe dumps sewage somewhere underneath their yard. The real estate man who sold them the house was quite proper when he showed the Fredericks the description sheet with the little "x" next to "sewer."

But no one told the Fredericks their new house near the center of the prosperous suburb of Arlington Heights really has no sewer at all, or at least has one in such disrepair that it causes the water in the toilet to end up in the back yard.

Everyone agrees the Fredericks' problem is not of their own making, but as usual, no one is willing to take or affix responsibility.

We think there is some responsibility to be spread around, but first, how is it that a family gets itself into such a fix?

The Fredericks are a young family and this is their first house. Like thousands of other families, they sought a starter house in a nice suburb. As anyone who has made that first step into the real estate market, it is very much like riding through the Donner Pass at midnight with your lights off.

The Fredericks did not notice that the family moving out had lived in the house only three months, or that a fresh coat of paint covered high water marks in the basement. The real estate agent passed on to the Fredericks only that information about the house supplied by the former owner. The real guilty party, it turns out, is the owner of the home during the 1920s who refused to hook up to the regular sewer line and let his sewer cross adjacent property to an old farm tile. Today, the sewage dumps into the soil because the farm tile and sewer are cracked and broken.

Enter now the Village of Arlington Heights which has examined the problem and finds the best help it can give the Fredericks is to give them a ticket and warn them unless they pay $2,700 for a new sewer, the property may be condemned.

Pardon our irony, but for the City of Good Neighbors, that's a nice touch. A new family moves into town and, through no fault of their own, they get stung.

Now we return to the question of responsibility. The village engineer and sanitarian are not at fault, as their actions are limited by village ordinances. The real estate company has been absolved by the Illinois Department of Registration and Education. The former owners could be sued if they had the money (which they apparently don't) and if the Fredericks wanted to go to court.

There is one more seat of responsibility and that is the village board. It is possible for the board to pass a special appropriation ordinance of $2,700 to correct this deficiency in the sewer system. The village would then correct an anomaly in the system which has eluded village engineers for decades and also correct an unsanitary condition.

There are, no doubt, numerous bureaucratic reasons why village government will not want to pass such an ordinance; it is directed entirely to the alleviation of the plight of one family; little that municipal government does is in the aid of individuals.

But it would be worth it to correct a condition which originated decades ago. And since the only continuous responsible entity from the 1920s until now is village government, we think the buck should stop at the village hall.

Clark Mollenhoff's 'Watch on Washington'

Testimony broke tax tale

by CLARK R. MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON — Without a doubt, Mary Walton Livingston, supervisory archivist at the National Archives, provided the most important evidence in deciding the major $576,000 question about President Nixon's federal income tax liabilities.

Her testimony and a corroborative net of memos and letters invalidated Nixon's tax deductions and will be at the heart of the House Judiciary Committee impeachment investigation and a federal grand jury investigation conducted by Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

The special prosecutor's probe will deal with the alleged fraud and misrepresentations permeating the bulky report of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation on the "examination of President Nixon's tax returns from 1969 through 1972."

No direct charge of fraud is in the 210-page staff report or the 786 pages of exhibits that conclusively destroyed President Nixon's claim he had completed the 1969 gift of vice presidential papers prior to the July 25, 1969, cut-off date for using such "gifts" of government papers for tax deductions.

But there are some flat contradictions and radically different stories. Some relate to the question of whether appraiser Ralph Newman viewed the papers and "designated" them in April of 1969 or whether he first saw the papers in November — more than three months after the deadline.

There is no dispute that the Nixon vice presidential papers were physically delivered to the National Archives on March 27, 1969. However, Mrs. Livingston's records consistently refer to them as "in storage" and as a "possible gift."

President Nixon contends it was his intention to make them a gift as of that date, and the White House, in support of the Nixon thesis, stated on Dec. 8, 1973: "On April 8 and 9, 1969, Mr. Ralph Newman, a recognized appraiser of documents, visited the Archives and designated the papers (that were intended as the 1969 gift.) He also pointed out the items he believed the President should retain."

Testimony of Mrs. Livingston and her detailed reports to her superiors and to Newman thoroughly dispute Nixon's lawyer's claim that Newman had examined the papers in April, 1969.

Faced with Mrs. Livingston's testimony, documents and corroborative witnesses, Newman admitted his recollection reported. "Insofar as Mr. DeMarco and Mr. Morgan are concerned, the staff notes that their versions of the stories have changed from the original versions related to the staff."

The special prosecutor's investigation will not be aimed at President Nixon, but at exploration of the various stories told by lawyers, accountants and the expert appraiser who had created the record upon which Nixon was claiming a $576,000 tax deduction on the 1969 gift of vice presidential papers.

The House Judiciary Committee investigation, with a decision on impeachment as its only function, will zero in on Nixon's knowledge of, and responsibility for, the various mistakes and misrepresentations palmed off on the public in the White House press releases.

Most embarrassing for Nixon is likely to be his statement at a recent press conference that he has indeed had the backdating of the deed investigated and has all of the facts.

When Nixon and his lawyers made the decision last December to ask the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation to conduct an investigation on the President's 1969 gift of vice presidential papers that was being questioned, they thought they had a good case pegged on a deed dated in April, 1969 — three months before the cut-off date.

The testimony of two lawyers was to be buttressed by an expert appraiser who had viewed the vice presidential papers in April and had set a tentative $500,000 value on them.

Then, Mary Livingston told the joint committee investigators that Newman hadn't seen the papers until November 3, 1969, and then provided the documents to prove it.

Newman modified his story on the crucial April date in the next meeting and the precise supervisory archivist chalked up a home run against the White House lawyers. A truly unusual achievement and the repercussions aren't over yet. (Released by The Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1974) tion was wrong and that he saw the papers for the first time on Nov. 3, 1969. This was seven months later than he had indicated in an earlier affidavit and three months after the July 25, 1969, deadline.

Newman's change of story then cast doubt on the statements of Los Angeles lawyer Frank DeMarco and former Deputy White House Counsel Edward Morgan who have admitted backdating a deed to the presidential papers to April 21, 1969. They contended the deed was actually a duplicate of the original deed and attached inventory, which have never been found.

Again, the careful testimony and documentation of Mrs. Livingston seriously challenges the story that an original inventory on the 1969 gift of vice presidential papers was in existence until March 27, 1970. That was when she and an archivist trainee, Jan Shelton, had gone into the locked room where the Nixon papers were stored and made the inventory that was transmitted to Newman for the first time.

The Joint Committee staff avoided any conclusions on fraud concerning these contradictions because it was instructed to merely report the facts. The committee staff did not DeMarco and his law partner, Herbert Kalmbach, went over Nixon's 1969 tax return with him on April 19, 1970, and he complimented them on the fine job.

"The staff does not draw any conclusion from this information that the President had any knowledge of any of the facts involving this deed," the joint appointment which was important to me. Mr. Pickett hurriedly came out of the store, cleaned up the whole mess, suggested I go right into the cleaners, following me in, picked up the bill and paid it and through it all was so courteous. His performance was way and above beyond the call of duty. Driving home, I thought about the situation and I thought I am glad this man operates his business in "my town." I am sure we have many more like him but they seldom get any recognition for the many nice things they do, and most of them are almost always involved in some worthy cause. Lauds local businessman Plaudits to a real businessman — and a gentleman, too! Just recently I had occasion to purchase a few quarts of paint from Pickett's in Mount Prospect. A small purchase, to be sure. Because I wanted "just the right shade" Mr. Pickett, an elderly gentleman, had to go back and forth three or four times to the front of his store where the color toner is and then back to the rear where he keeps his shake-up machine. This involved quite a bit of his time and I am sure I overtried his patience. After leaving the store and walking out to my car, the bag broke and one of the paint cans opened and fell on the street splattering paint on some of my clothing and on my brand new jacket. You can bet it was upsetting as I am in real estate and was already late for an

by PHIL NEWSOM

French voters will make the final decision but already the era of Gaullism in France is being proclaimed at an end.

party, and Francois Mitterrand, candidate of the Socialist-Communist coalition.

Under the rules of French elections, a candidate must poll a majority to be elected in the first round.

This is not considered likely, so a second round two weeks later is anticipated between the two leaders on May 19.

Public opinion polls give the 57-year-old Mitterrand a clear edge with something over 40 per cent of the vote in the first round.

D'Estaing is next with about half that much, Chaban-Delmas is a close third. An important fourth is an independent, Jean Royer, a favorite of the small shopkeepers. These small businessmen are estimated at four million in a total electorate of 28 million.

In a runoff, it is expected Royer's votes would go to D'Estaing.

Among the three leaders, D'Estaing, 48, is the youngest, but with a long and distinguished record in government and as an economist. Of aristocratic appearance, he made known more than 10 years ago his determination eventually to become president of France.

He is appealing to the voters to create with him a more dynamic France — as he puts it, a France reborn.

He is a conservative who in his many years in office at times has clashed sharply with the Gaullists.

Early favorite and choice of the Gaullist party is Chaban-Delmas, 59, a war hero and a liberal.

Even more than the other two, his election would symbolize a transition in Gaullism.

In the European Common Market De Gaulle sought a so-called federation of fatherlands in which each nation retained sovereignty. He expelled NATO from France and insisted on his own "force de frappe."

Chaban-Delmas, in contrast, has called for "a new European society" with a European executive and an autonomous Eu-

City hospitals flocking to suburbs

mula, population shifts and a slight increase in existing beds through additions to local hospitals. The state formula shows an 80.6 per cent local hospital occupancy rate in 1973, with 61,474 admissions and 507,140 patient days. The report calls for a total of 1,625 area beds by 1979.

No new hospitals are recommended for the Northwest suburbs because state planners oppose construction of facilities with less than 200 beds. The report, which will be official after public hearings, will be discussed today at the Pick-Congress Hotel in Chicago and in Aurora Thursday.

THE MESSAGE IN the new state health plan is simple — the Chicago area has enough hospital beds to meet demands. But bed distribution is geographically inadequate. More than 4,200 excess beds are located in northeast Chicago and the South Side has nearly 1,000 beds that require modernization. Patients are imported from the South to North Side.

A second bed-need study was financed by the North Suburban Assn. for Health Resources which includes 13 local hospitals. The report, prepared by consultants Ernst & Ernst, recommends construction of a 200-bed hospital west of Schaumburg by 1975, construction of a 150-bed hospital near Barrington between 1975 and 1980 and opening by 1985 of a 200-bed hospital in the Buffalo Grove-Wheeling area.

In a 1972 study for the villages of Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg, Ernst & Ernst recommended a 300-bed hospital and a 250-bed hospital near Barrington. Officials of Ernst & Ernst said the two bed-need recommendations, in the 1972 study for Hoffman Estates-Schaumburg and in the 1974 study for NSAHR, differed because a "broader scope" was used in the second study. The consultants analyzed health care in the North and Northwest suburbs for NSAHR and concentrated on the Schaumburg-Hoffman area in the 1972 study.

NSAHR HAS REFUSED to comment on the Ernst & Ernst recommendations. The hospital association announced April 18 that it opposes additional bed construction in most Northwest suburban areas, including Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village and Des Plaines. The statement did not include Schaumburg, twice recommended site by Ernst & Ernst of a new hospital.

"Some areas are going to need more beds. We want to get beds where they should be," said Al Weinstein, executive director of the health resources group.

Unnecessary construction could cause a "tremendously poor situation. Very low occupancy would result. Quality would go down. The length of stay would increase. Costs would go up," he said.

The oldest hospital construction controversy in the Northwest suburbs involves Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates.

Schaumburg officials have talked about a hospital since 1967, and Mayor Robert Atcher once predicted need for three hospitals in the Schaumburg area.

HOFFMAN ESTATES officials began study of hospital construction in 1970, the same time as neighboring Hanover Park.

Both municipalities point to the $10,000, 33-page 1972 Ernst & Ernst report as proof of hospital need. The report findings, which made use of population projections, hospital admission analysis and demographic studies, include a statement that "bed shortages of 108, 1,371, and 2,050 are anticipated for 1975, 1980 and 1985 . . . approximately 25 per cent of the study area patients are traveling to hospitals other than those in surrounding areas."

Plans should be taken to attract new physicians to the study area," the report states. Medical office buildings should be constructed adjacent to new hospitals and hospitals should "cooperate" to cut service duplication and waiting lists.

"Nowhere in that study does it say there is a need for eight additional hospitals in this area," an official of Alexian Brothers Medical Center told The Herald. "We believe there is a need for additional acute-care beds in the Northwest suburbs and that construction of some new hospitals may be necessary. We do not endorse the massive number of beds that are now proposed for the area."

(NEXT: What will happen to suburban medical costs.)

How the regions compare...

Listed are the Comprehensive State Health Planning Agency's recently released bed recommendations. The improvement, subject of statewide hearings before the final plan is completed, recommend no new hospital construction in the Chicago area.

Grapes and tomatoes sold by the pound, but spinach was available by the handful. The country-like setting of the Community Center added to the informality.

Suburban Living

ESPECIALLY FOR THE FAMILY

THIS YOUNG SHOPPER found it hard to choose between the commercial snacks and nature's offerings at the Hoffman Estates Woman's Club open air market. To solve the problem, he simply decided on both.

Outdoor produce market lures thrifty shoppers

by FRAN HECKART

Rusted milk cans weren't moving too well for $10 at the open air farmer's market sponsored by Hoffman Estates Woman's Club Saturday, but fresh produce was a different story.

Shoppers laden with grocery bags and egg cartons mulled the grounds of the Woman's Club Community Center free to inspect the variety of fresh produce displayed in open crates. Carrots, reportedly one of the best bargains, were gone before 10 a.m.

Fresh eggs at 45 cents a dozen were another hot item. By mid-morning it was estimated that six or seven cases of eggs, each containing 30 dozen, had been sold. Sales were still going strong by noon as another shipment of eggs arrived.

ALTHOUGH SOME of the produce looked discouragingly limp, shoppers didn't seem to mind. There were still plenty of bargains. And there are always those who consider fresh fruits and vegetables a bargain at any price.

Where else could you find a bag full of spinach for 30 cents? Or two large heads of lettuce for 50 cents? Celery, even if it needs a good trimming, is still a good buy for 19 cents.

A spokesman for the club explained that some of the produce was purchased for variety. Pricing on the higher items was still only cents above cost at the Water Street Market in Chicago. For example, asparagus was available but of poor quality and 80 cents a pound. On the other hand, off-season grapes seemed to be of excellent quality — even at 85 cents a pound.

Avocados, cantaloupes, grapefruit, oranges, apples, cabbage and sweet corn afforded a great variety, and often a great boon to the budget.

WHITE POTATOES were purchased for the market since they were less expensive than the red ones at the wholesale market.

Small button-like mushrooms were sold for $1 per pound. Zucchini squash — at 35 cents and cucumbers for 25 cents were also included at the market.

Shoppers seemed to love the market on the grassy slope in front of the huge farm house which is now the community center. By mid-morning club members had arranged for a second trip to Water Street market for more produce. Even though the cashiers used pocket calculators, the event had all the trappings of a country produce market.

Additional merchandise included canned vegetables, floor pillows, peanut butter — a good buy at 45 cents — and Mazola oil for $4.99 a gallon.

It was all for a good cause — to raise money for Resusci-Annie to be used by Hoffman Estates paramedics in training and demonstrations.

THERE WAS NO pre-packaged produce at the farmer's market on Saturday. Shoppers were free to fill their own bags with just what they needed.

Is group living legal?

by JULIE MARTOCCIO

As you might expect at social gatherings, any topic of conversation that involves a legal question is generally passed on to me. One of the most interesting ones lately was a discussion about group living which finally ended up in an argument.

One woman said she didn't want any "hippies" living in her neighborhood. Another said she "just knew" hers would be "overrun" with them because there were two already — but not hippies — within several blocks of her and still another had a completely opposing view.

The last said that every night as she walked her dog, she deliberately went past "the commune" down the street because she could hear the kids "chanting," that they were a nice "bunch" and they didn't bother anybody.

I had to admit that I was well aware of the pros and cons of the question but that I couldn't give a definite answer then and that they should wait until the U.S. Supreme Court made a decision in a case that was pending before it.

• Recently, the U.S. Supreme Court did hand down a decision concerning the right of local governments to restrict "collective living." In a precedent-making decision, the court upheld a village's right to enforce a zoning ordinance which restricted the number of unrelated persons living together in the same quarters.

• It came after a number of hearings and appeals in lower and appeal courts throughout the country. What the women in the discussion had forgotten was that communes, group living or collectives, as they are commonly known, are not new concepts. Throughout this country and all over the world, there are religious groups such as the Amish and Mormons and special purpose groups that center around education, among others. But the rapid increase in this type of living had all the parties involved anxious to get the matter squared away by the highest judicial authority in the nation.

• In this legal tug-of-war the collectives used as argument their civil rights under equal protection of the law, while the local government based its case on the right of association and privacy.

• In the deciding case, a New York village under its zoning ordinance objected to six male and female students from a local university living in the same house and ordered them to leave. The owners of the house and three students filed suit and appealed all the way up to the Supreme Court which held against them.

• Closer to home were two similar cases, one in Des Plaines and another in Evanston, the latter a well-known coffee house.

Now that the matter has been settled, some of the questions following it read like the end of a daily soap opera episode. Will communes find another way of existing? Will unrelated persons living together as the law objects marry in order to get around it? If marriage isn't possible, will they adopt each other in order to qualify? Tune in tomorrow to your local newspaper.

(Readers are invited to submit questions regarding legal problems of women and children. Attorney Martoccio's column is intended to inform and not advise. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 230, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60005.)

Speaking of . . .

You, too, can be fix-it expert

by KAY MARSH

"Things fall apart," wrote William Butler Yeats back in 1921.

And while it's not exactly what he had in mind, at our house they certainly do. Constantly. With "handymen" fast becoming as extinct as the dinosaur, and probably even more expensive, most of us are trying to cut down on appliance ills and soaring repair bills.

Can you, too, become an expert Mrs., Miss or Ms. Fix-it in your spare time without really crying? Probably not. But you can do more than you think you can.

Naturally you won't attempt a major electrical or plumbing project any more than you'd go in for do-it-yourself brain surgery. And you'll always double-check for possible safety hazards. But there's no reason you can't change a fuse, put in a washer or make many of those minor repairs that otherwise eat up your budget in $5 and $10 bites.

How do you learn "how to?" FOR ONE THING, you can take a course. Our local faculty women's club recently sponsored a course in simple repairs which proved so popular a second group had to be scheduled on another night. Women with M.A.'s and Ph.D.'s flocked to learn the different kinds of screwdrivers and, more important, what to do with them. Community colleges, high schools and local organizations often sponsor similar classes in home or auto mechanics.

You can also question the repair people who come to your aid at home. Of course, they're there to fix things, not to tutor you. However, at today's prices you might as well at least watch closely and ask a lot of questions.

But even if you don't want to take a course or pester a repair man, you can still learn a lot on your own.

The best place to start is by reading service manuals carefully every time you buy a new appliance. Too many of us still go by the old saying, "If all else fails, read the instructions." You'll save trouble and money if you read the instructions first. Be sure, too, you keep all manuals, directions, etc. handy for reference when you need them.

YOU CAN ALSO clip and save articles from this newspaper, as well as from other publications, for your own Fix-it File. Ms. magazine, for instance, has regular articles on "populist mechanics" that, for my money, are as clearly written and as easy to follow as any I've ever found.

Finally, you can read a book. The children's section of your library is a great place to find out how something works and why. Scout handbooks are often helpful, too.

In the adult section, check for books on repairs written especially for the amateur. No author will ever admit that he is writing for the "dumb female with negative mechanical aptitude and six left thumbs." But if the title says "simple," "primer" or something similar, the translation should be approximate to "goof-proof."

A recent book for beginners I can recommend is Michael Squeglia's "The Handywoman's Guide." Squeglia, a teacher of appliance repair, tells you how to fix irons, toasters, coffeemakers, vaporizers, fry pans and other "small heat-producing electrical appliances." He also tells you how to replace a fuse, splice a wire, replace a plug and handle other common maintenance and repair jobs.

THE BOOK IS WELL written — i.e., even I can understand it. It also has more than 200 line drawings that go right along with the step-by-step text. Included, too, are kindergarten-simple drawings of screwdrivers, pliers and other common household tools.

Squeglia, by the way, doesn't assume that you have a full set of expensive tools. His directions call for such easily available items as screwdrivers, bobby pins, knitting needles, nail polish remover and such.

Best of all, he organizes his book in terms of problems and solutions, rather than under complicated headings. He won't, for instance, tell you "how to clean a clogged and clogged pressure spray orifice," but what to do "when the iron does not spray." He'll say what to do "when water boils but doesn't enter the coffee basket" instead of "how to unjam a floating disc-shaped valve in the pump tube of your percolator-type coffee maker."

In short, "The Handywoman's Guide" seems to have been written specifically for the "dumb female with negative mechanical aptitude and six left thumbs."

Which certainly makes it just exactly right for me, and maybe also just for you.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Mead

Bride's gown patterned after maids' ensembles

The bridesmaids' Empire gowns were purchased first and then Nancy Christiansen's mother made Nancy's white crepe bridal gown in the same style.

Nancy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Christiansen, Mount Prospect, and Loren Mead of Escanaba, Mich., were married April 6 in Central United Methodist Church in Escanaba. Loren is a self-employed carpenter in Escanaba and Nancy, a graduate of Prospect High School and Illinois State University, is resource room teacher in an Escanaba public school.

Mrs. Richard Houle, Bark River, Mich., was matron of honor, and the couple's sisters, Lois Christiansen and Cheryl Mead were bridesmaids as well as ushers for the noon time double ring service.

Mrs. Houle's gown was in lime green and the maids' in bright yellow. The lime and yellow was used in the bride's gown as trim at the high waistline, the short sleeves and ruffle. Nancy carried multi-colored roses and wore a headpiece of fresh roses while her matron of honor carried a basket of yellow daisies and wore green ribbons in her hair. The maids had wrist corsages of the yellow daisies and yellow ribbons in their hair.

Pam Houle, 3, was flower girl and her gown matched her mother's. Two-year-old Darin, brother of Pam, was ring bearer and their father, Richard, was best man.

The luncheon reception was held in the Houle home after which the newlyweds honeymooned two days in Wisconsin. They make their home in Escanaba.

They eloped to Colorado

Instead of a wedding at home Lynel Ann Stevens of Prospect Heights and William M. Scholobohm of Glenview eloped to Colorado for their April 6 wedding, and then honeymooned in Denver.

They were married in the Lutheran Church of the Holy Spirit in Littleton by their friend, Robert Voss, assistant pastor. The pastor, who had written two songs for the wedding, also served as best man, and his wife, Marcie, and daughter, Christy, were matron of honor and flower girl.

Lynel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Stevens, and William, son of the William Scholobohms, met last year while vacationing in Daytona Beach, Fla.

A '71 graduate of Wheeling High School, Lynel is employed in the offices of the Kitchens of Sara Lee in Deerfield. Her bridegroom, a '69 graduate of Maine East High School, studied at the Milwaukee Institute of Technology and Stout State University, Wisconsin. He is a sales representative for Sara Lee.

Scrambled eggs chef style

Dear Dorothy: I'm a retired chef and read your column constantly. I'd like to offer my version for scrambled eggs. Break two eggs in a mixing bowl. Add salt and black pepper, four tablespoons of milk and a small dash of baking powder. Mix to a foaming consistency using a wire whip, beater or blender. Pour this mix into a low, heated frying pan in which a small amount of cooking oil has been heated. Stir constantly.

When the eggs reach the desired consistency and fluffiness, remove immediately from the pan. This two-egg recipe will equal any four eggs dumped and scrambled on a griddle.

—Royce W. McGee

This sounds great. Reminds me all over again that by far the majority of great chefs have always been men.

Dear Dorothy: How can I get clear nail polish out of a blue polyester cotton skirt? Tried nail polish remover, but it only smeared the polish, making it white and flaky.

—Mrs. Christina Falcinelli

You'd best take it to a reliable cleaner who may have something he's willing to try. Every stain chart says to sponge such a stain with either acetone or amyl acetate and that even nail polish remover will sometimes work. My guess is that the polyester is the trouble.

The homeline

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: After you clean your stainless steel hood, saturate a piece of cotton with rubbing alcohol and wipe the hood thoroughly. Do not dry. This treatment also works beautifully on the chrome trim of any appliance and all chrome-plated faucets. It is a nonabrasive and removes all soap residue, leaving a lovely sheen.

—Ginger Allen

Dear Dorothy: My family loves the kind of packaged vanilla pudding that is cooked. Sometimes I jazz it up by topping with cut-up blanched almonds. It makes the dessert a bit "special."

—Maria Biaggi

THINGS YOU MAY NOT KNOW ABOUT CONSERVING ELECTRICITY.

Do-it-yourself hints to cool food for less cost.

Refrigerators and freezers operate night and day. If they're not in proper working order, you can be wasting energy around the clock. These tips can help maintain them in top operating condition.

Door gasket test. To check the tightness of the door seal, place a piece of paper between the gasket and the cabinet. Close the door with normal force and try to pull the paper straight out. There should be a slight drag. Repeat the test at various places around the door, including the hinge side. If there are places where no drag occurs, have a service man check the gasket and the door for proper alignment.

Condensate drain. If you have a no-frost or self-defrosting refrigerator, examine the condensate drain. Make sure it's clean. A prolonged blockage will cause frost to build up on the coils and impair efficiency.

Condenser coils. If your condenser coils are exposed on the back of the unit, clean them regularly. Use a bristle brush or vacuum cleaner. Newer refrigerators have the condenser coils covered by a panel. Remove it for cleaning. Some models have coils beneath the unit. To clean, remove the front grill and vacuum.

These and other refrigeration hints are among the 101 ways to conserve electricity at home in our free booklet. To receive a copy, write Commonwealth Edison, Department AV, P.O. Box 767, Chicago, Illinois 60690.

Harper fashions on runway during May Selections will be made today during the Jury Show at Harper College of fashions to be modeled at several upcoming shows in the area.

The jury, made up of professionals from the fashion industry, will select 110 fashions from among 200 garments to be shown by students of the Harper two-year Fashion Design career program.

In shows to follow, students will present their fashions for community organizations, at shopping centers and at college events. The climax of the season will be the large annual show at Harper for the public.

During a Career Carousel at Harper on May 9 and 10, a representation of the fashion collection will be modeled in mini-shows. The shows will take place in the College Center on May 9 at 10 a.m., 12:30 p.m. and 3 p.m.; on May 10 at 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m.

THE MOUNT Prospect Business and Professional Women's Club will present scholarships to three freshmen students whose work they select as outstanding during an evening show May 9 at Arlington Park Towers.

For the first time, shows have been arranged at Randhurst in Mount Prospect. Show times are 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. May 11 at the Town Hall in the shopping center.

The Palatine Newcomers Club will view the students' fashions May 18 at 2:15 p.m. at Old Orchard Country Club in Mount Prospect.

The Rotary Club of Rolling Meadows is sponsoring a May 20 show where fashions are to be worn by professional models. This showcase is being produced at 1 p.m. by students who are members of the Harper's Bizarre Club. The show will take place at the Rolling Meadows Holiday Inn.

ANOTHER FIRST is a show for the Barrington Associates of Women's Board of the Art Institute of Chicago, to be presented May 21 at 12:30 in Barrington.

Coordinator Josie Tomes will describe the Harper Design program for the group.

Herald to launch outdoor page May 8

A special page on the outdoors will appear each week throughout the year in the Herald newspapers, starting Wednesday, May 8.

Jim Cook of the Herald sports department will coordinate the coverage which will be directed at all aspects of the outdoors and will run as a regular Wednesday sports feature.

"We're pleased, even a little excited, to be launching this new coverage," said Herald Executive Editor Ken Knox. "Interest in the outdoors is at an all-time high nationally, and no less here."

"This new dimension in our scope — part of the Herald's continuing effort to broaden its service — will reflect that. We know that thousands of our readers are involved in the outdoors in some way, and we want to tell that story.

"We're especially pleased," Knox continued, "that Jim Cook will be coordinating this coverage for us, because he not only has proved himself a fine journalist in his almost four years at the Herald, but he's an active participant in the outdoor life — which makes all the difference in telling it."

"The addition of the outdoor page strengthens our total sports package," said Herald Sports Editor Bob Frisk. "This is an area which we've touched with an outdoor column and occasional stories but have never developed. There is a definite need for special treatment because of the tremendous interest in the outdoors in this area."

Watch for this new feature in the award-winning Herald sports section starting next Wednesday.

Fishing tourney shows Chain is off to good start

It was a big weekend on the Chain of Lakes and it isn't even August. It seems that in ordinary years, it takes the Chain nearly all summer to settle down and get to be a good fishing hole. But Saturday and Sunday the weather and the fish cooperated and the Midwest Open Bass Tournament was a huge success.

Saturday morning, 46 teams roared away from Bob Lang's boat dock on Lake Marie aiming at a slice of the $1800 in prize money made up from contestant's entry fees, and a table full of trophy hardware that you can't spend but that looks good on the bookcase.

The first indication that it was going to be a good tournament came when one pair of contestants had trouble starting their boat engine and missed the chaos of the Leffmans start.

Assuming, probably, that all the "good spots" would already be taken by the first boats out, the pair, with what must have been a "what the heck, why not?" shrug, cast spinner lures at the shoreline of an island 30 feet from Lang's dock. A small, but legal 12 inch bass came in on the first retrieve for one of the anglers.

The island didn't produce another bass in the two days, which is just as well, because 46 boats can't fit around it anyway. But it was a good start.

Most of the heavyweights in largemouth bass fishing were entered and present for the tournament, so it was obvious that the $900 championship purse wasn't going to go to a beginner. On the other hand, some pretty good fishermen were out of the money when the bass were counted up Sunday afternoon.

The rules of the tournament provide that only artificial lures can be used, so there were no worm dunkers or back-trollers in the race. The first, third and fourth place teams took all their fish on Lang's single spin Raider.

Second place is in doubt, because two "dark horses," Ron Ayers and Ralph Rosenski showed up from Chicago and kept their mouths closed and caught fish and took second place and $450 back to town with them.

The bass were all in the shallow bays and channels. No one took a largemouth out of deep water. A few fish were caught on plastic worms, but the spinners were the most effective.

As always, though, there was an exception. A big exception. Four pounds, 12 ounces. Larry Hoppe, from Mount Prospect took the tournament's biggest bass, Sunday, on a Big O, running it almost on the surface. If you care about such things, the lure was chartreuse.

The fish didn't get Larry's team into the money, but it got him a grandstand-

by Bob Holiday

size trophy. The biggest northern was also 4 pounds 12 ounces. Larry Charleton got it and the trophy that matched it.

Over 200 largemouth bass were taken by the 92 contestants in two days, but only a half dozen northern were caught. No walleyes showed up at the weigh-in, although two contestants reported catching and releasing three undersized walleyes.

Of the more than 200 fish caught, 95 per cent were released alive back into the lake. The remaining 5 per cent were, filleted. The high survival rate of the tournament bass was due to the fact that most bass boats today are equipped with aerated live boxes.

When you catch a fish, you gently put him into water that has air pumped through it. When he is weighed in later, he is still at full weight and feeling as fit as before he was caught.

Charleton of Antioch and his partner Warner Langenstrass of Elk Grove were the big winners. For their 15 bass and two northern pike, they picked up a check for $900. Rosenski and Ayers were second for $450. Chuck Munchall, Antioch and Ted Finger, Crystal Lake were third for $270. Bob Lang, Antioch, and Bob Johnson, McHenry were fourth for $90.

There was no wind for either day of the tournament, thus anglers were able to fish pretty much as they pleased. Once they found fish, they were pretty certain of taking more than one on a location.

Sunday was overcast, which might have spread the bass a little further up and down the shorelines, but it didn't slow their appetite. Even the rain that fell the final hour of the tournament didn't keep the contenders from sticking it out to the end.

But Charleton and Langenstrass already had it won by then. And they won it merely by following the instructions on the package. You cast the spinner at the shoreline and retrieve it with a steady crank — just fast enough to keep it above the weeds and the rocks. With the water in the Chain still somewhat high, but fairly clear, the lure was easily visible and the bass could move in on it confidently.

Chain lake waters are now at 60 degrees, within a couple of ticks of perfect, so with any luck at all, northern Illinois fishermen could be on the verge of some of the best fishing in years.

Lang also announced that he will host the Illinois State Singles Championship at his Lake Marie Fishing Center, as well as the annual Mr. and Mrs. State Championship. The Mr. and Mrs. State Championship will be a two day event, Sept. 14 and 15. For entry information, call 395-9887.

Lake Michigan, too, is ready for action if the spring winds are through blowing for a while. Most of the fishing right now, of course, is by net from the shoreline. The smelt are having good evenings and probably will continue to be plentiful for another week or two.

The U.S. Coast Guard begins its work on the big lake today, so charter boat captains can begin cruising for coho and lake trout this weekend. Twice daily weather summaries and signals will be available through the fall. If the shoreline action is any indicator, fishing out on the lake should be excellent.

From Belmont Harbor all the way up the shoreline to Door County, fishermen are taking brown trout, lake trout, chinook and coho salmon. The latter three are anything but plentiful and they aren't big, but they're there.

The brown trout, however, seem to be thick in the waters off Waukegan and Kenosha. One 11 pounder was taken at the Commonwealth Edison bridge off north Waukegan Sunday afternoon, just before the rain.

And for the anxious anglers heading for Wisconsin for the Thursday general opening — two things: There seems to be gasoline available almost everywhere, but it is expensive — about the same as here. Second: The state police are serious about their 55 mph speed limit, so watch it.

Falcons' Stevens smashes three homers in 11-3 win

by ART MUGALIAN

Don Stevens of Forest View became only the second Mid-Suburban League hitter in history to connect for three home runs in one game when he turned the trick Tuesday in the Falcons' 11-3 romp at Prospect.

The tall Forest View first baseman tied the MSL record set by Prospect's Dave Kingman, now with the San Francisco Giants. Kingman achieved the feat on the very same diamond in 1967.

Stevens cleared the fences the first three times he came to the plate. His first shot in the first inning followed a homer by teammate Ken Butzen and travelled over the wall in dead center. It was hit off a fastball from Knight starter Mark Keane.

The Falcon senior hit his second roundtripper in the third with two runners aboard. He timed a slow curve from Keane and lofted it high and far over the fence in left.

By that time, Stevens had given Forest View's Larry Monroe all the cushion he needed. The big righthander coasted to a six-hit, 11-strikeout victory, although he allowed a couple homers himself. Keane and Tom Hayes blasted four-baggers for Prospect.

Stevens came to the plate in the fifth with Butzen on base with a walk. He was facing Knights' reliever George Savage. The Forest View slugger picked on a fastball and sent it on a line deep over the left field fence.

With six runs batted-in in the first five innings, Stevens had provided the Falcons with a 7-1 lead but he wasn't through.

In the sixth, Stevens greeted Prospect's third relief pitcher, Rick Streng, with an RBI single to right, giving him seven RBIs for the day. Stevens was in the on-deck circle in the seventh awaiting a fifth at-bat when the inning ended.

The 11-run explosion was the biggest this season for the Falcons. Butzen, in addition to his homer, scored four times and drove in three runs. Forest View's Greg Pfaff was three-for-four.

Stevens' fantastic performance with the bat overshadowed the pitching of Monroe, who once again labored under the watchful eyes of several major league scouts. But Monroe was not at top form. The hurler was wild with his curve ball much of the time, walking four and hitting a batter. But he managed to wiggle out of a few scrapes, stranding seven baserunners.

Wet grounds forced postponement of five of the six Mid-Suburban League games although by 4:30 p.m. the skies had cleared and the sun was shining. The five games that didn't make it into the record book Tuesday now are scheduled for Thursday afternoon.

League action today will match Elk Grove at Conant, Fremd at Arlington, Wheeling at Rolling Meadows, Buffalo Grove at Forest View, Palatine at Hersey, and Schaumburg at Prospect.

Harper women capture tie with 4-year school

The women's tennis team at Harper College took on an experienced junior varsity from Wheaton College Monday. Despite playing two freshmen as well as two young women who had never played in a tournament before, Coach Martha Lynn Bolt was pleased with her team's 3-3 tie.

"It was a good learning experience for my new women," she said, referring especially to sophomores Nancy Brooks and Barbara Thornwald. Both were playing competitively for the first time with Barbara winning. "It presented some very good challenges to them as well as the entire team."

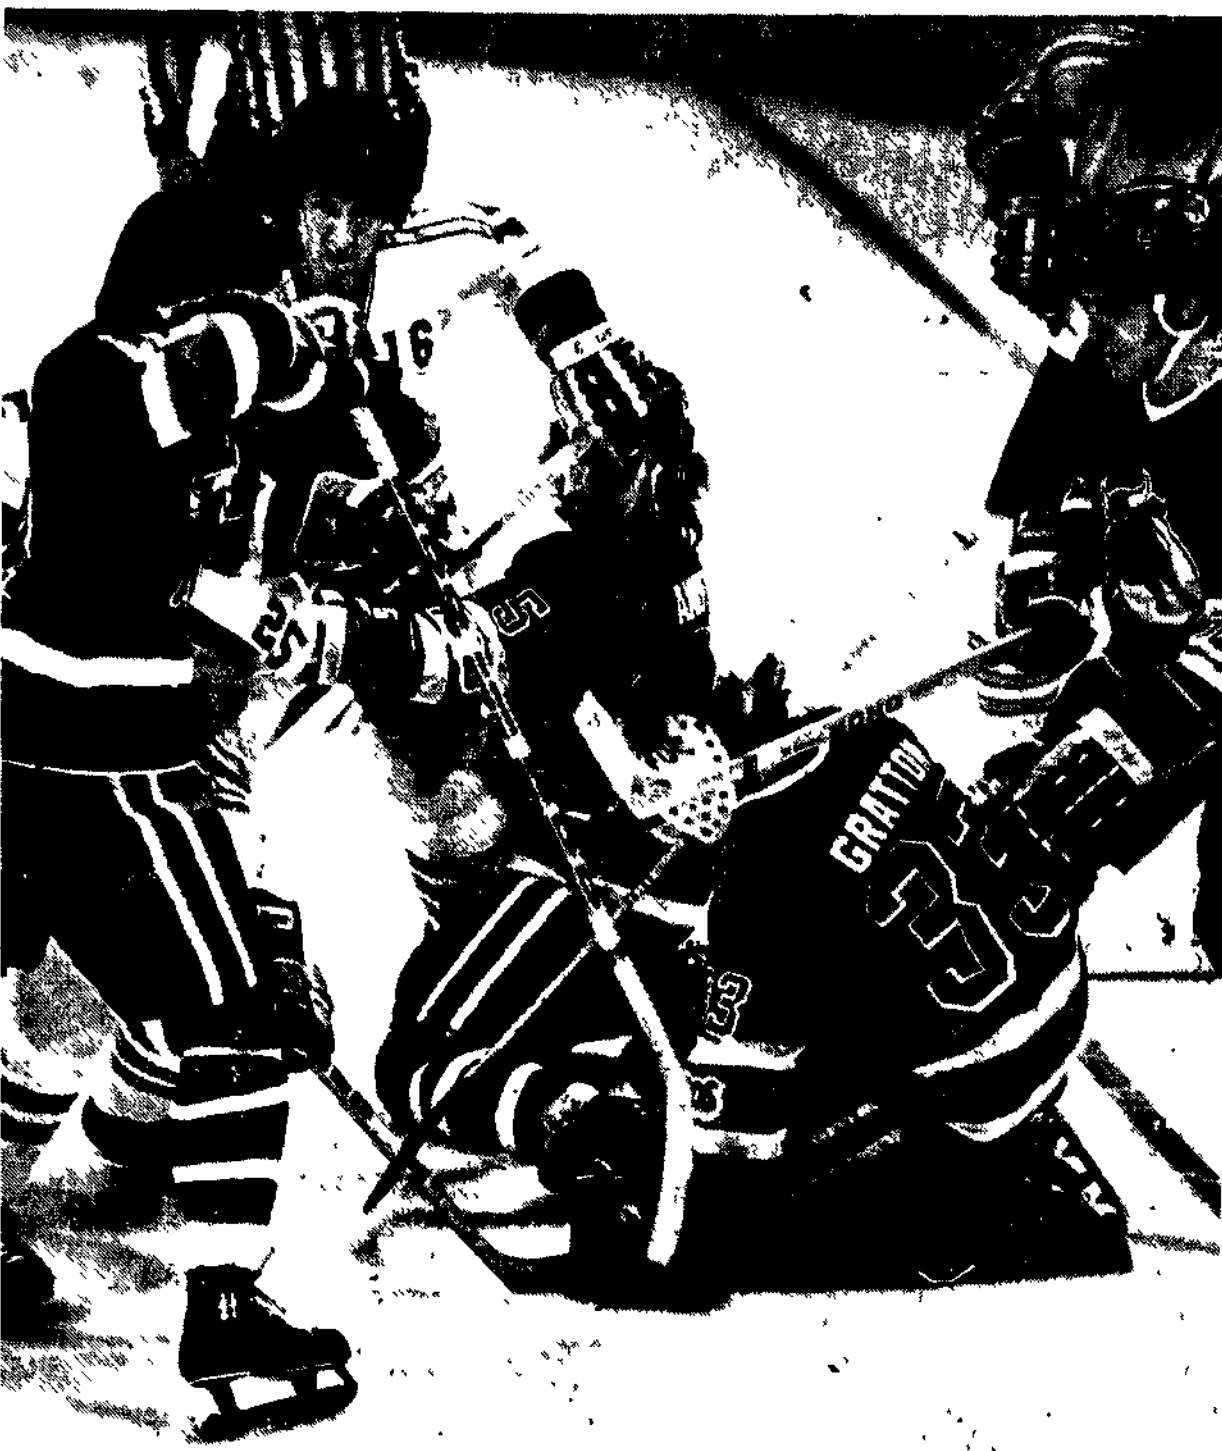

Wheaton, already having played several times before coming to Harper's season opener, was shocked by the deadlock.

As mentioned, Thornwald registered a 6-4, 7-6 victory over Jen King to capture sixth singles, one of two matches which Harper won in the clutch on a tie breaker.

Other winners were freshmen Kathy Zyrkowski and Ann Gilmore. Zyrkowski defeated Jennifer Steel at second singles, 6-2, 7-5. Gilmore, competing at third singles, beat Carol Jones 6-2, 6-3.

Absorbing the setbacks were sophomores Linda Ahrens, Margie Casurella and Nancy Brooks. Ahrens, playing first singles, lost to Jean Podlenski, 6-2, 6-1.

Casurella, the team's only veteran player, dropped a 6-2, 6-3 decision to Jayne Isaacson. While Brooks lost 6-0, 6-1 to Debbie McCoy at fifth singles.

THERE IS A PUCK in this picture, but it's well hidden underneath Toronto goalie Gilles Gratton. The ensuing mess was, well . . . a mess. This action occurred during

by ART MUGALIAN
Track and Field Editor

Rich Sharpe is the best kept secret of the 1974 track season.

Until this week, anyway.

The Fremd shotputter was just another name on the roster when he took a third place in the Mid-Suburban League indoor meet a few weeks ago.

Then, last Saturday, Sharpe won the Class A shot put competition at the 42nd annual Palatine Relays with a toss of 52-1½ and the secret was out.

"Now everybody in the world knows who Rich Sharpe is," kidded his coach, Pat Brogan, after the athlete's picture appeared in a Chicago newspaper.

An even bigger secret was divulged Monday in a triangular meet at Wheeling — Sharpe is a sprinter. The 200-pound junior raced to a victory in the 100-yard dash against the best runners Wheeling and Arlington had to offer, and he did it in :10.5.

"He's done :10.5 three times now," said Brogan, "and he doesn't even work on it. He's ragged, he's got poor form, but he does it just on his power. He's a good, hardworking kid."

Sharpe took time off from his shotputting duties to devote a few seconds to the sprint. But his major talent is geared toward the weight event. He won the shot put at Wheeling with a heave of 49 feet.

"His prime event is the shot put," Brogan noted. "This is his first year in track and he should concentrate on the shot. Eventually, when he gets his technique perfected, he'll be able to spend more time on running. But we'll use him in the sprints this year. We'll enter him in the big meets."

Brogan doesn't think there is anything unusual about a shotputter excelling in the sprints. "The shot put is a technique event," he said. "It's not just sheer force. You have to have speed and quick muscle explosion and a quick arm. Speed and shotputting go hand in hand."

The Viking coach named several athletes who have combined the two events with success. "But they're usually not good for more than 40 yards," Brogan said.

Sharpe is good for at least 100.

The Vikings won 10 of 17 events at Wheeling to total 100 points, compared with 29 for Arlington and 33 for the Wildcats. In addition to Sharpe's double victory, Steve Whitel won both hurdles races (15.4 in the highs and 41.6 in the lows), Dave Scott won the 800 in a downpour in 2:01.5, and Paul Kinyon ran the mile in 4:31.4.

Arlington got wins from the 440-yard relay team and from Dave Hillert in the pole vault (11-6) and Scott Narup in the discus (138-11). Wheeling got victories from John Lortz in the high jump, Borys Kusyk in the triple jump, Rich Reese in the two-mile (9:57.9), and Pete Piet in the 220 (23.9).

A CLASSIC STRUGGLE among three powerhouses of the MSL took place at Hersey Monday when the Huskies hosted Palatine and Schaumburg.

In the wake of their Class B win at the Palatine Relays Saturday, Dennis Gar-ber's Saxons edged to victory at Hersey, also. It was Schaumburg 65, Hersey 58½, and Palatine 54½ in a titanic duel.

Schaumburg took three first places in the field events — Steve Kropke won the shot put, Dave Wodek captured the shot put, and Ed Martin won the long jump. But Hersey's Mark Zakula took the triple jump (41-8½) and Palatine's Mike Murphy notched a first in the high jump with a superb leap of 6-5.

"I don't know how accurate the bar was," said Huskie coach Larry Travis after the best high jump performance in the MSL ever. "It might have been sagging a little."

The Saxons' Scott Mielke was second in the high jump with an effort of 6-4. Hersey freshman Scott Sowers was third at 6-2.

Other excellent showings were made by Palatine's Chuck Bell, who ran the mile in 4:26.1 to follow up his 4:24.5 in the Palatine Relays, and Martin of Schaumburg, who hurdled to a win in the highs in :15.2.

Palatine's Clark Rasmussen won the 330-yard lows in :41.6 and Hersey's Chris Cooney rattled off a fine two-mile in 9:42.8.

The closeness of the meet may indicate the kind of competition to expect at the conference meet, a week and a half away. The three teams, along with Fremd, are the strongest in the league.

CONANT GOT SOME good results in unexpected places as they downed Buffalo Grove in a dual meet, 119-22.

The undermanned Bison managed to win three events, including Larry Smolinski's discus victory at 132-5, but they were no match for the talented and depth-laden Cougars.

Ron Gummerson's Conant outfit got double wins from Jeff Brandl (both hurdles races) and Mark Kaufman (mile and 800), and the Cougars benefited from three good efforts from Bob Borczak in the triple jump (first with a 38-7¼) and both hurdles events.

The highlight of the meet, however, came near the end when Cougar pole vaulter Doug Paape cleared the bar at 14 feet. It represented the highest an MSL vaulter has gone outdoors this season, in or out of conference.

Elk Grove's golfers win

Elk Grove stormed to a double-dual varsity golf verdict over host York and Proviso East. The Grenadiers of head coach Bob Lorenz fired a nifty 176 to grab first place from York's 179 and Proviso's 182.

Steady Scott Walker fired a round of 43 to pace the Grenadiers, but balance was the key as both Mark Christensen and Mike Branigan carded identical 44's.

Mark Johnson and Jim Busch were just another step behind with 45's, Mike Kwon notched a 49 and Mike Christensen a 51.

Rolling Meadows captures second in tennis feature

Thanks to a second doubles title as well as solid showings by the whole team, Rolling Meadows brought home the second-place trophy from the Addison Trail Tennis Invitational Saturday.

Winning the eight-team meet was Elmwood Park with 16 points. Meadows was tied by St. Charles for second with 13. Then came West Chicago 11, Cary Grove 6, Addison Trail 5 and Argo 0.

It marked the second straight year that Coach Neil Peterson's varsity teams have taken back some hardware from the Trail Blazer tourney.

Jim Peterson and Greg Nykiel accounted for Meadows' only championship by beating Elmwood Park's Lee and Stevens 10-3 in pro sets. They started their drive to the title with wins over Cary Grove's Godfrey and Celthmal, 10-4, and Addison's DuBois and Majerchia, 10-4.

The Mid-Suburban League's other entrant — Conant — had a champion, too, in Buddy Edmondson. They captured the first singles title by edging Greg Zydiak 10-7. Edmondson had trailed 5-1 before making his dramatic comeback.

Edmondson reached the finals with wins over Cary Grove's Doug Shaffer, 10-1, and Rolling Meadows' Bob Herman, 10-0.

Meadows' Herman won his opening match with West Chicago's Doug Ryan, 10-3. He too made a brilliant comeback after trailing 7-1. After losing to Edmondson, Herman lost to St. Charles' Hillberg, 10-2.

The Mustangs' Ed Sholly "did one heck of a job" according to his coach in nearly winning a championship. Sholly stopped St. Charles' Doug Moore, 11-9.

Conant's Kurt Kupitz, 10-3, before losing to West Chicago's Anderson, 10-5.

Brad Schenck won some points for Meadows by beating Argo's Heberly 10-1 in third singles. Schenck lost his opening round to Addison's Bill Harms, 10-6, as well as his first consolation match to Orson Raynor, 10-4.

The first doubles team of Greg Hanat and Jack Szewacki handled Conant's Kurt Eckert and Rob Wade 10-7 in the first round. Then this Mustang team defeated West Chicago's Randall and Toms, 10-3, before losing the finale to Elmwood Park's Buccini and Dozer, 10-2.

"I was mighty pleased," said Peterson of his Mustangs. "The boys played real well. It was definitely a team effort all the way."

Conant's Faynor won a consolation title with an easy 10-5 victory over Joe Mangano of Cary Grove. He lost his opening round to St. Charles' Dan Mills, 10-6, before getting hot.

The Cougars' second doubles team of Greg Vassmer and John Buckles also won a consolation championship. After losing to Elmwood Park's Lee and Stevens, 10-5, Vassmer and Buckles battled back to beat West Chicago's Dodge and Murphy, 10-3, and Cary Grove's Godfrey and Celthmal, 10-1.

Just missing a consolation crown was the first doubles team of Eckert and Wade. After losing to Meadows, they beat Addison Trail's Rick Sauck and John Jarosh, 10-1, and led Cary Grove's Beckhart and Thorsen 3-4 before falling 11-9.

Kupitz took a third place. He beat Addison's Norm Sturm, 10-2, lost to Sholly of Meadows and then beat Cary Grove's Chris Mangano, 10-6.

West, East defeated in tennis

Niles East defeated Maine West, 4-1, and Maine East was a 3-2 loser to Notre Dame in varsity tennis played Friday.

Maine West's only point against Niles was scored when Jeff Trecker was a 6-4 and 6-2 second singles winner over Sherwin Corey. In other singles play, Niles' Gene Guerrero beat Frank Lux, 6-2 and 6-2, while Steve Pales was beating West's Rick Petrucci, 7-5 and 6-0.

The Warriors lost both doubles matches. Jim Witthold and Steve Niles were 7-6 and 6-3 first doubles losers to Don Kaplan and Scott Skalesky. Ed Addleman and Steve Semler were 7-5 and 6-4 losers to Jim Cohn and Marty Avers at second doubles.

Maine East accumulated both its points in singles play against Notre Dame. Dave Mozdren was a 7-6 and 6-1 winner over Mark Tarczynski. Norm Petersen beat Notre Dame's Ken Macur, 7-6 and 6-3. But at first singles, East's Tim Brosnan lost, 6-2 and 6-3, to Mike Chilicki.

In doubles play, Notre Dame's Rick Thielsen and Dave DeLorenzo were 6-3 and 7-5 winners over East's Jim Harkensee and Karl Aschacher. East's Kent Silbert and Dave Marder lost, 6-0 and 6-3, to Warren Chinnick and John Thode.

Lake Park too much for Palatine

Palatine ran into one of the Tri-County Conference powerhouses Friday when Lake Park came to the Pirate courts. Despite a tremendous battle at second doubles, the Pirates suffered a 5-0 shut-out.

Nearly earning a point for Coach John Carlson's team was the fine freshman duo of Mike Esenberg and Phil Groesbeck. They lost the opening set 7-6 against Dave Kesyk and Dave Colletta, battled back to win 6-3 in the second set before losing 7-5 in the finale. The Lancers had a little easier time of it in the remaining matches:

Tom Pauly over Lew Sevey (6-1, 6-3), Duane Hemmerle over Mac Bennis (6-3, 6-3) and Bob Bartilotta and Andy Powers over Bob Day and Jerry McNabney (6-2, 6-3).

Palatine salvaged a split with a 3-2 victory on the sophomore level.

Stavros pleads guilty to 4 charges

Eight charges dropped, but he now faces prison, fines

by LYNN ASINOF

James Stavros pleaded guilty Tuesday in U.S. District Court to extorting a total of $62,000 from three Wheeling developers and filing a false 1972 income tax return.

The guilty pleas came as part of an agreement with the U. S. Attorney's Office in which eight additional counts against Stavros were dropped, including charges of extorting an additional $121,250 from Wheeling developers.

STAVROS, FORMER Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, faces a maximum of 63 years imprisonment and up to $35,000 in fines. Sentencing is scheduled for June 4 before U. S. District Judge Hubert Will.

In changing his plea, Stavros, 43, admitted to:

- Extorting $32,000 from the Zale Construction Co., developers of Lakeside Villas, in the spring of 1971.

- Extorting $30,000 from Bernard Kron of Harmony Builders, developers of Harmony Village, in January 1973.

- Extorting $30,000 with Wheeling Building Dir. William Bieber from the Meister-Neiberg Co., developers of Lake of the Winds, in December 1972.

- Filing a false 1972 income tax return in which he "substantially understated his income."

The U. S. Attorney's Office gathered

Teacher, board team continue pact talks

No agreement was reached Monday between bargaining teams for the Dist. 21 school board and the Wheeling Faculty Council on the 1974-75 teacher contract.

The meeting was the fourth in three months. Because the negotiations are closed to the public, details of the contract under discussion are unknown as well as the stage of the talks.

Another bargaining session is scheduled for 4 p.m. Monday at the Dist. 21 administration building, 909 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

massive amounts of evidence of payoffs to Stavros, which was to be presented during the trial scheduled to begin Monday. A bill of particulars filed by the government charged that Stavros extorted more than $300,000 from developers beginning in 1968.

THE GOVERNMENT planned to picture Stavros as an extortionist who threatened his victims with physical harm unless they paid him off. The prosecutors intended to show Stavros' control over key Wheeling positions, which enabled him to threaten developers with permit and construction delays.

The new income tax charge was filed by the U. S. Attorney's Office Tuesday just prior to Stavros' change of plea. The one-count criminal information did not specify how much 1972 income Stavros failed to report.

"We also filed with the court an agreement which was entered into, which in essence stated that he would plead guilty to the things I've described and at the time of disposition the remaining counts would be dismissed," said Asst. U. S. Atty. Steven Kadison.

KADISON SAID his office will make known its case against Stavros at the time of sentencing.

Stavros' attorney, Robert J. Butler, said the agreement filed in court provides his client with substantial protection against further prosecutions.

"All pending investigations will be terminated," Butler said. "The U. S. Attorney will not prosecute for any other violations prior to the year 1974. The agreement is quite comprehensive. It covers all pending and contemplated charges and current investigations."

While Butler would not comment on whether Stavros was providing information to the government, he said that the U. S. Attorney's Office might testify to such cooperation at the time of sentencing.

Stavros is the second person to plead guilty to charges stemming from a federal grand jury investigation into alleged shakedowns of Wheeling developers and businesses.

MICHAEL VALENZA, former Wheeling trustee, pleaded guilty to conspiring with William Bieber to extort furniture from Wickes, Inc. Stavros also damaged Bieber's defense by pleading guilty in a

Village board action seen

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling officials said Tuesday they expect some official board action in response to James Stavros' admission that he extorted $62,000 from three Wheeling developers.

Reacting with shock and surprise, several trustees said the board will have to take steps to make sure that a similar scandal never occurs in Wheeling again.

"I would hope that we would take some sort of action to eliminate the possibility of this ever happening again,"

Trustee Don Jackson said. "One of the things I would like to see is an independent consulting firm come in and help us so that the village does not get into a situation like this again."

Jackson noted that the government cases against Stavros, former trustee Michael Valenza and Building Director William Bieber cited the use of official village positions to extort goods and money from developers.

"I still can't believe that one man or

Thompson record still perfect

Guilty pleas by James Stavros Tuesday maintained the 100 per cent conviction record of U.S. Atty. James Thompson's suburban corruption investigation.

In other cases disposed of so far, the following have either pleaded guilty or been convicted in U.S. District Court.

- Michael Valenza, former Wheeling Trustee and political associate of Stavros. He admitted guilt in a conspiracy to commit extortion after a second extortion charge was dropped.

- Six former Hoffman Estates village officials, including the community's first two mayors, Edward F. Finger and Roy L. Jenkins. They pleaded guilty to accepting bribes from a developer, Kaufman and Broad Inc., which itself pleaded no contest to charges of bribery. Bernard M. Peskin, the firm's attorney, was convicted of passing payoffs to the officials.

- Mayor Curtis Whitaker of south suburban Westhaven, convicted on two extortion charges.

Charges are pending against officials of Wheeling, Brookfield, Calumet City and Cook County. Probes by Thompson's special investigations division continues in county government and more than 40 suburbs.

Junior Woman's Club praises action

Bicycle safety topic for roundtable

by JOE FRANZ

Buffalo Grove's bicycle safety program and erecting of signs welcoming persons to the village were discussed at Monday's President's Roundtable.

Janice Dahlmer, of the Buffalo Grove Junior Woman's Club, told the audience of 25 persons she is pleased with the progress that has been made toward implementing the bike safety program which her group suggested several months ago.

She said most of the details have been worked out and the program should go into full swing by May 11, bicycle inspection day. The inspections will be the highlight of Bicycle Safety Week, May 5-11.

VOLUNTEERS FROM a number of local organizations will make the inspections at eight locations throughout the village. Inspections will be made at the following schools: Alcott, Irving, Kilmer, Longfellow, St. Mary's, Tarkington and Willow Grove. Residents also can go to Willow Stream Park.

The inspections will be made from 9 a.m. to noon. In the event of rain, the inspections will be postponed until May 18.

Children and adults are urged to have their bikes inspected. Brakes, gears, tires, rims, spokes, chains, frames and reflectors will be inspected on each bike. Reflectometer tape also will be available to those who want it. In addition, all bikes that are ridden at night will be inspected to make sure they have lights.

After the inspection, each bike owner will receive a list of all points inspected and notations of corrective action that should be taken. Bicyclists also will be given pamphlets on bicycle safety and maintenance. At the time of the inspections, residents will be able to get bicycle licenses. The village board recently passed an ordinance requiring licensing of all bikes by June 1.

Those that do not get the licenses the day of the inspections can get them at the police station, 50 Raupp Blvd. The licenses are free and should be affixed to the frame under the seat.

BESIDES LICENSES, the new bike ordinance has provisions for issuing warning tickets for children and tickets that carry fines for adults (17 and older) who are found in violation of traffic laws.

Under the new ordinance adults could

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
First in a series

A hospital building boom is following the population, branching out from the central city and rushing into suburbia.

Schaumburg, Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Barrington top a list of proposed Northwest suburban hospital sites that divides planning experts and excites local civil leaders.

Suburban officials, with eyes on a substantial increase in community services at little direct cost to taxpayers, are greeting the hospital derby with open arms. But, planners are warning that proposed construction will greatly exceed demand for new beds, pushing up hospital costs to all patients.

Seven new hospitals are proposed for suburbs in DuPage, northwest Cook and Lake counties. More than 1,512 new beds are planned. Total construction could exceed $80 million.

THE LIST OF proposed projects in metropolitan Chicago, which now has 30,502 hospital beds, includes 30 new hospitals or satellites and grows weekly.

Actual need for hospital construction is a controversy among administrators and health planners. Projections vary, one recently released report shows a need for 94 additional beds in local suburbs by 1979 and another predicts a demand for 750 more beds by 1980.

Area hospital proposals include:

- Schaumburg: A 180-bed, $12 million satellite of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago was approved in October by the Illinois Hospital Licensing Board. Construction is planned this summer and the hospital is seeking $42 million in low-interest bonds from the Illinois Health Facilities Authority to build tandem projects in Schaumburg and Park Forest.

- Hoffman Estates: A 312-bed, $14.3 million for-profit hospital operated as a franchise of American Mediacorp Inc. of Pennsylvania has received a state permit and opening is expected in early 1976.

- Wheeling: A 228-bed, $11.3 million general hospital proposed by Franklin Boulevard Hospital of Chicago was approved by the licensing board April 10.

- Glendale Heights: A 166-bed, $7.9 million general hospital proposed by Central Community Hospital of Chicago received state approval in December. Central Community is a sister hospital of Franklin Boulevard and the controversial project is similar to the planned facility in Wheeling.

- Barrington: A 228-bed, $11.7 million

The breakdown by hospital...

Results of a Northwest Cook County hospital inventory show 1,531 existing beds with a projected need for 94 additional beds, or a total of 1,625. No new hospitals are recommended. The 94 beds could be added to existing facilities, the state hospital plan indicates.

Hospital	Existing Beds	1973 Admissions
Northwest Community	433	14,437
Resurrection	157	4,362
Holy Family	240	9,210
Alexian Brothers	302	14,344
Lutheran General	399	19,121
TOTAL	1,531	61,474

hospital is planned for fall construction by the Evangelical Hospital Assn. The "Good Shepherd Hospital" will be one of a three-hospital "system" that includes Christ Community Hospital in Oak Lawn and Good Samaritan Hospital under construction in Downers Grove.

- Addison: A 180-bed, $12.5 million hospital is part of a long-range plan by DuPage Memorial Hospital of Elmhurst. The project was approved in December by the state and includes initial construction of an emergency treatment facility and a physician office-clinic.

- Glennview-Northbrook: A 200-bed, $13 million satellite of Evanston Hospital is state approved. The acute-care hospital project drew homeowners' protests during plan commission hearings in January but was annexed and rezoned by the Glennview Village Board April 15.

Mt. Sinai Hospital Medical Center of Chicago and Sherman Hospital of Elgin also are considering suburban expansion. Sherman received licensing board permission April 10 to build a 125-bed, $6 million hospital in Crystal Lake. Mt. Sinai, which has announced plans for a north suburban branch, reportedly has an option for 125-acres at Dundee and Sanders roads in Northbrook.

PREDICTIONS OF need for hospital construction are "tricky and controversial," according to Ted Brzyski, Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission health planning officer. Bed need projections are kept secret as "in-house, working" documents by the numerous health-planning agencies that examine hospital construction proposals. Each agency has individual statistics and formulas for determining construction need.

Need for hospital construction "is nothing like the five, six or seven they're talking about," said urbanologist Pierre de Vise, former head of the Chicago Regional Hospital Study. "Unoccupied beds in local hospitals could increase by 20 per cent if all proposed hospitals are built," he said.

The controversy is statistical. Planning agencies use complicated formulas that include estimated future population, daily hospital admissions, number of existing beds, residence and age of patients and type of treatment to estimate need for hospital construction.

The "bible" of bed-need estimates is the Illinois Comprehensive State Health Planning Agency's "Survey and Plan," a bi-annual report designed to guarantee "adequate" health services "without unnecessary duplication."

IN 1972, THE STATE report listed 1,534 existing beds in the Northwest suburban area at Resurrection Hospital in Chicago, Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village, Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights and Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines. Projected six-year bed need for the area was 544 additional beds.

The revised, 1974 state plan, released in preliminary form this month, now shows a need for only 94 additional beds in the area by 1979, despite increased population. Spokesmen for the state said the 450-bed decrease in projected need is caused by changes in the bed-need for

Chambers of Commerce vote to form an association

by TONI GINETTI

Local chambers of commerce in the Northwest suburbs have voted to form a Northwest Suburban Chamber of Commerce Assn.

The association, which has been discussed by the local groups since September, will attempt to act as a voice for business and industry in the area. The group may also serve as a lobby in legislative matters dealing with business and industry in the suburbs.

The association Tuesday elected Harry O'Brien, director of the Rolling Meadows Chamber, to head the association. Elected as vice president was Stanley Klyber, of the Elk Grove Assn. of Industry and Commerce; treasurer, Bud Patz, of the Bensenville Chamber; and secretary, Marge Alt, of the Rolling Meadows Chamber.

Committees for the group have also been established. Earl Johnson, executive manager of the Arlington Heights Chamber will head the membership committee; Clarence Schiaver of the Mount Prospect Chamber will serve as publicity chairman and Marion Bauer of the Palatine Chamber will head the special events committee.

O'Brien has been a main force behind organization of the chamber group. He has served as Rolling Meadows Chamber director since June, 1973. Prior to that he had been a district manager for the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce.

O'BRIEN HAS SAID the chamber association may become involved in several projects soon, including extending the limits of the Chicago Trucking Zone to the suburban area. The zone encompasses metropolitan Chicago and a 10-mile radius of the city. In those limits special trucking and freight rates are charged for deliveries to businesses and industries. Rates for deliveries to suburban businesses are substantially higher.

The formation of the association was first discussed last fall among representatives of the Elk Grove, Arlington Heights, Palatine, Wheeling, Mount Prospect, Barrington, Itasca, Bensenville, Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates, Des Plaines, Schaumburg and Rolling Meadows chambers.

The group has drafted bylaws that will be reviewed by local chambers prior to their formal adoption, O'Brien said. The association plans to meet June 18 in Des Plaines.

Most area chamber officials had expressed support for the concept of the association. Johnson said Tuesday he was enthusiastic about the group. "I think that this is a very natural kind of progression," he said.

Marijuana charge

added to theft count

A 23-year-old Wheeling man was charged with possession of marijuana after a quantity of the illegal drug allegedly was found on him Monday at the Randhurst shopping center, 999 N. Elmhurst Rd., Mount Prospect.

Mount Prospect police said Brian D. Jones, 170 E. Highland Ave., Wheeling, had been arrested for shoplifting and was being searched when the drug was allegedly found. Jones allegedly tried to steal $6.12 worth of fishing lures from the Montgomery Ward store, police said.

Jones will appear May 29 in the Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court. He was also charged with theft.

$900 jewelry theft

Jewelry, mostly rings, valued at $900, were stolen during a burglary Monday at the Susan Bellison residence, 931 Belmar Ln., Buffalo Grove police said.

Police said it is possible the front door had been left unlocked as there were no signs of forced entry. Other items of jewelry were left behind, they added. The burglary occurred between 9:40 a.m. and 3:10 p.m.

case where Bieber is co-defendant. Indictments against Stavros, Bieber, Valenza and three other former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials were returned Jan. 31, following a year-long federal probe.

The prosecution in the Stavros case was handled by Kadison and Howard Stone, assistant U. S. attorneys working under U. S. Atty. James R. Thompson's special investigations division. The investigation was handled by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Intelligence division of the Internal Revenue Service.

4 sump pumps taken

Four sump pumps were stolen recently from the basement of buildings under construction at the Crossings development, Ill. Rtes. 83 and 53 in Buffalo Grove.

Police said the pumps, valued at $400, were stolen either Friday or Saturday. There was a report of an unfamiliar vehicle at the development Friday night.

Suburbs urged to define goals

Northwest suburban business and community leaders must begin immediately to define "suburban goals" and a "suburban strategy" if they are to have a voice in their future, a national political researcher said Tuesday.

Speaking before representatives of local chambers of commerce at the Greenhouse Restaurant in Palatine, Lawrence K. Brainard of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States said there is no common voice speaking in behalf of the 2 million persons living in the suburban Chicago area. Because of that, downstate and Chicago leaders are deciding questions directly affecting the suburbs.

"Without the development of some kind of suburban strategy, the suburban voters will continue to think in terms of the old rural or urban ties without seeing what is best for the suburbs as a unit," Brainard warned. "This kind of splintering will just keep them apart."

BRAINARD, a political and legislative affairs researcher for the U.S. Chamber association and a lobbyist for 35 congressional districts in Illinois and Indiana, said economic growth in the Northwest suburbs in the past decade has made the area "the new economic base of the city of Chicago."

Population in the area in the past 10 years has doubled, he added, but there has been no development of a "suburban conscience."

Suburban officials have remained fragmented and have not worked together effectively for the area good, he said. He said an example of the problem is the suburban opposition to the Regional Transportation Authority, which he said many officials and suburban residents have opposed because they fear it may bring blacks and other minorities to the area.

SEVERAL CHAMBER representatives disputed Brainard, saying the opposition to RTA was based on feelings that the bill did not offer help for the suburbs. But Brainard said the lack of a suburban voice to guide the preparation of the RTA bill resulted in rural downstate leaders and Chicago leaders drafting a bill suited to them. Suburban voters then responded in the only way they knew how, a "no" vote, he said.

Brainard called on the chamber representatives to hold a series of conferences to outline what he called "suburban goals" and then to act as a lobbying group for suburban interests in the state legislature.

The areas they will need to focus on will include continued economic growth, autonomy from Chicago and improved transportation to and from other suburbs and places where suburbanites work, Brainard said. He said businessmen and municipal governments need to recognize the area's needs, eliminate duplication of services and units to influence decisions being made for the area.

Christian Scientists to meet in old church

An informal group of Christian Scientists in the Wheeling-Elk Grove area are initiating church services at 5 p.m. Sunday at the old church in Chamber of Commerce Park, Wheeling.

The church services will be based on weekly Bible lessons prepared by the First Church of Christ, Scientist of Boston. The public is invited.

Learning center—hub of knowledge

by JILL BETTNER

Seated at a table, an intense fifth-grade boy assembles intricate parts of a model computer. Nearby, a girl charts the growth of plants she's raising from seed. A group in one corner chat animatedly as they work on floor plans for 21st century homes.

All these activities and more are going on simultaneously in the library-learning center at Whitman School, Dist. 21, Wheeling.

Each of the 17 schools in the district has a center similar to the one at Whitman, a place where children are free to satisfy appetites for learning whetted by classroom instruction. Dist. 21 serves Buffalo Grove, Wheeling and portions of Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights.

"I look on the learning center as an extension of the classroom," said Whitman principal Jack Cushman. "It's a center for a variety of learning experiences."

THE LIBRARY-learning center has replaced the somewhat austere school library where students were required to sit in hard-backed chairs and maintain scholarly silence.

The atmosphere of the learning center at Whitman, as contrasted to the old-style school library, is much more informal.

The large, interesting center was created last summer as part of an extensive remodeling program at Whitman, the oldest school in the district. The room is carpeted and furnished with both big and small tables covered with student projects in progress. From the ceiling hang mobiles of spinning fish, fashioned as part of the recent deep sea exploration by children interested in the underwater world.

In one corner, large, comfortable chairs are grouped for relaxing with a book or small group discussions.

MOST OF THE children talk to each other while they work, but the noise level is minimal.

"It's an informal atmosphere, but it's carefully guided," Cushman said. "The kids are busy and it's natural for them to want to talk about what they're doing. You might call it an active learning atmosphere."

A lot of the activity in the learning center at Whitman is initiated by Greta Gilchrist, learning center director. Her job is to provide the stimuli to allow children to turn their natural interest into an educational experience.

All students in kindergarten through the sixth grade spend at least one hour per week in the learning center, usually in groups of about 15 children each. It is time when the kids can pursue hobbies, interests and research of their own choosing.

Car has 4 flats, it's stolen anyway

Someone stole a white 1967 Ford station wagon with four flat tires early Monday from the front yard at 180 Pine St., Wheeling.

Police said a trailer may have been used to remove the automobile. The value of the vehicle, owned by Joaquin P. Perez, is not known.

Two firemen promoted to captain

Lt. Robert Krause and Lt. James Hansen of the Buffalo Grove Fire Department will be promoted today to the rank of captain.

Krause started as a volunteer with the department about 10 years ago and became a full-time fireman about three years ago.

Hansen was a volunteer with the department for about five years before going full-time about two years ago. Hansen, Krause and Fire Chief Wayne Winter are the only full-timers on the department.

Winter said Tuesday the promotions will give the department three captains. Don Nellessen, a volunteer, is the other captain.

Concerning the promotions of Krause and Hansen, Winter said, "Both men have put in a lot of years, a lot of hard years to make the department what it is today. They have done an excellent job and have earned their ranks."

WINTER SAID the department has recently been reorganized and Hansen and Krause will each be in charge of one division. Hansen will head the engineering division which is in charge of department equipment and Krause will head the administrative division which takes care of all records.

Assistant Chief Roy Carew is in charge of training and operations and Assistant Chief William Dettmer heads the fire prevention division.

Hansen and Krause's promotions, Winter said, will make way for the promotion of two firefighters to the rank of lieutenant. Since there are 12 men eligible for the posts, an examination will be given May 8 to determine the two men that are most qualified for the promotions.

Twin Groves band wins state title

The Twin Groves School honor concert band took top honors last Saturday in statewide competition sponsored by the Illinois Elementary School Music Assn.

The Buffalo Grove band placed first from among 50 schools participating in the contest at Jackson Junior High School in Villa Park.

The Twin Groves band is made up of 57 youngsters in grades six, seven and eight. Gitana Folkes is the director.

MacArthur band wins first place

The MacArthur Junior High School Concert Band has won a first place award in the 1974 concert band competition sponsored by the Illinois Grade School Music Assn.

The 67-member band, under the direction of David J. Thomas, won the award in competition last weekend in Villa Park. It is the second consecutive year the Dist. 23 band has placed first.

The band, composed of sixth, seventh and eighth graders, played three numbers in the competition including "March of the Blazetec," "Aria" and "Jedermann Overture."

Earlier this spring the school's Jazz Band placed first in district competition for jazz bands. The band is directed by Warren Birkett.

Songs played by the jazz band for the competition were "Straight Ahead," "Groovin' Easy" and "The Funky Turtle."

be fined no less than $5 and no more than $500 for each violation. Police Chief Harry Walsh has suggested the fine be set at $5. Police will send letters to the parents of children who receive warning tickets.

In the case of tickets that carry fines, residents will be given a court date, at which time they could, if they desire, plead innocent to the violation. Officials have suggested the police start out by issuing only warning tickets.

Walsh has suggested the village establish an informal bicycle safety court to become involved in taking pictures and processing their own film, collecting stamps, growing terrariums as well as several different kinds of art projects.

One group recently tried their hand at repairwork, taking apart and reassembling small appliances such as an electric shaver, popcorn popper and lamp.

Commenting on the educational investigations of students in the learning center, Cushman said, "It's really a chance for them to open up their minds and do something beyond memorizing the date of a particular war in U. S. history."

At various times during the year, children working in the learning center have review cases involving children with flagrant or repeated violations. The court, he said, should be oriented toward educating the youths rather than punishing them.

Mrs. Dallmer said the bicycle safety committee hopes to start a youth court by the end of the summer or early next spring.

FOLLOWING THE presentation on the bicycle program, Armstrong suggested the village and local organizations consider erecting signs at the entrances to the village informing persons that they have entered the village.

He said he is not interested in bulletin board type signs, but rather one that would welcome drivers to the village. "I think the sign could have a motto or clever saying that might reflect the type of community we have," Armstrong said.

Armstrong offered no suggestions on what the sign might say, but asked that various local organizations make recommendations on the proposal.

It was suggested the village hold a contest in Buffalo Grove's schools to establish a motto for the village. It also was suggested that the village ask the schools to hold a contest among art students to come up with an attractive design for a sign. Armstrong said both ideas are "excellent" and said they should be explored.

Other matters discussed at the roundtable included:

• Buffalo Grove's participation in the United States bicentennial celebration which will start next year. A representative of the Illinois Bicentennial Commission asked the audience to consider village participation in the 200th anniversary of the founding of the country.

• Free blood pressure testing by the Wheeling-Elk Grove Nurse's Club. On May 18 the club will have units stationed inside the Buffalo Grove Mall and the Wheeling Village Hall from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The service is being held in conjunction with the Heart Association of Cook County.

three men — namely Stavros, Bieber and Valenza — could perpetrate all of these crimes," Jackson said. "If they in fact could perpetrate all of the crimes, there is something very wrong with our village government."

THE THREE WERE among six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials indicted Jan. 31 after a year-long federal probe into alleged shakedowns of Wheeling developers and businesses.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said he would like to protect the village by asking developers to sign a form that states no "strongarm" pressure was used during the approval process. He said this would act as a safeguard against any future scandals in Wheeling.

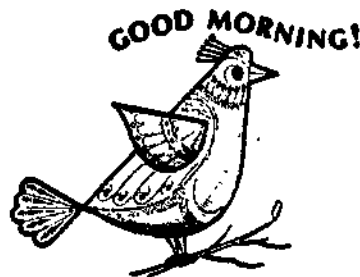

"I think the board will get together as a whole and make a decision as a whole, probably on the advice of the attorney," Scanlon said.

Other trustees also agreed that the board would have to discuss the matter, probably at Monday night's meeting. "We have to start taking another look at the developers around here," Trustee Ed Berger said. "We're at least going to have to get together and make some decision."

Trustee William Hein said the guilty pleas will probably force the board to "readjust our thinking. I'm sure that as each trial comes up, it is going to make the board react in different ways," he said.

Hein, however, said the board must not lose sight of the need for direction as the Wheeling community continues to grow. "The objective is to keep going forward," he said.

LIKEWISE, School Dist. 21 Supt. Ken Gill said he was also looking for the Wheeling community to continue moving forward.

Does suburbia need those new hospitals?

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
First in a series

A hospital building boom is following the population, branching out from the central city and rushing into suburbia.

Schaumburg, Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Barrington top a list of proposed Northwest suburban hospital sites that divides planning experts and excites local civil leaders.

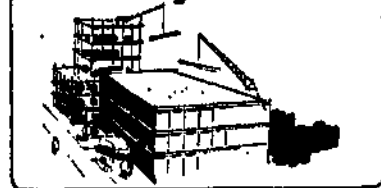

Suburban officials, with eyes on a substantial increase in community services at little direct cost to taxpayers, are greeting the hospital derby with open arms. But, planners are warning that proposed construction will greatly exceed demand for new beds, pushing up hospital costs to all patients.

Seven new hospitals are proposed for suburbs in DuPage, northwest Cook and Lake counties. More than 1,512 new beds are planned. Total construction could exceed $80 million.

THE LIST OF proposed projects in metropolitan Chicago, which now has 30,592 hospital beds, includes 30 new hospitals or satellites and grows weekly.

Actual need for hospital construction is a controversy among administrators and health planners. Projections vary, one recently released report shows a need for 94 additional beds in local suburbs by 1979 and another predicts a demand for 750 more beds by 1980.

The Hospital Explosion

Area hospital proposals include:

• Schaumburg: A 180-bed, $12 million satellite of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago was approved in October by the Illinois Hospital Licensing Board. Construction is planned this summer and the hospital is seeking $42 million in low-interest bonds from the Illinois Health Facilities Authority to build tandem projects in Schaumburg and Park Forest.

• Hoffman Estates: A 312-bed, $14.3 million for-profit hospital operated as a franchise of American Mediacorp Inc. of Pennsylvania has received a state permit and opening is expected in early 1976.

• Wheeling: a 228-bed, $11.3 million general hospital proposed by Franklin Boulevard Hospital of Chicago was approved by the licensing board April 10.

• Glendale Heights: a 186-bed, $7.9 million general hospital proposed by Central Community Hospital of Chicago received state approval in December. Central Community is a sister hospital of Franklin Boulevard and the controversial project is similar to the planned facility in Wheeling.

• Barrington: a 226-bed, $11.7 million hospital is planned for fall construction by the Evangelical Hospital Assn. The "Good Shepherd Hospital" will be one of a three-hospital "system" that includes Christ Community Hospital in Oak Lawn and Good Samaritan Hospital under construction in Downers Grove.

• Addison: a 180-bed, $12.5 million hospital is part of a long-range plan by DuPage Memorial Hospital of Elmhurst. The project was approved in December by the state and includes initial construction of an emergency treatment facility and a physician office-clinic.

• Glenview-Northbrook: a 200-bed, $13 million satellite of Evanston Hospital is state approved. The acute-care hospital project drew homeowners' protests during plan commission hearings in January but was annexed and rezoned by the

The breakdown by hospital...

Results of a Northwest Cook County hospital inventory show 1,531 existing beds with a projected need for 94 additional beds, or a total of 1,625. No new hospitals are recommended. The 94 beds could be added to existing facilities, the state hospital plan indicates.

Hospital	Existing Beds	1973 Admissions
Northwest Community	433	14,437
Resurrection	157	4,362
Holy Family	240	9,210
Alexian Brothers	302	14,344
Lutheran General	399	19,121

Glenview Village Board April 15.

Mt. Sinai Hospital Medical Center of Chicago and Sherman Hospital of Elgin also are considering suburban expansion. Sherman received licensing board permission April 10 to build a 125-bed, $6 million hospital in Crystal Lake. Mt. Sinai, which has announced plans for a north suburban branch, reportedly has an option for 125-acres at Dundee and Sanders roads in Northbrook.

PREDICTIONS OF need for hospital construction are "tricky and controverial," according to Ted Brzyski, Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission health planning officer. Bed need projections are kept secret as "in-house, working" documents by the numerous health-planning agencies that examine hospital construction proposals. Each agency has individual statistics and formulas for determining construction need.

Need for hospital construction "is nothing like the five, six or seven they're talking about," said urbanologist Pierre de Vise, former head of the Chicago Regional Hospital Study. "Unoccupied beds in local hospitals could increase by 20 per cent if all proposed hospitals are built," he said.

The controversy is statistical. Planning agencies use complicated formulas that include estimated future population, daily hospital admissions, number of existing beds, residence and age of patients and type of treatment to estimate need for hospital construction.

The "bible" of bed-need estimates is the Illinois Comprehensive State Health Planning Agency's "Survey and Plan," a bi-annual report designed to guarantee "adequate" health services "without unnecessary duplication."

IN 1972, THE STATE report listed 1,534 existing beds in the Northwest suburban area at Resurrection Hospital in Chicago, Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village, Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights and Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines. Projected six-year bed need for the area was 544 additional beds.

The revised, 1974 state plan, released in preliminary form this month, now shows a need for only 94 additional beds in the area by 1979, despite increased population. Spokesmen for the state said the 450-bed decrease in projected need is caused by changes in the bed-need for-

By federally financed leasing program

Businessmen may support moderate-income housing

by STEVE BROWN

Advocates of low- and moderate-income housing for the suburbs may be seeing important new allies, in the form of leading businessmen, line up behind their cause.

A group of Des Plaines officials were told by Bernard Malm, chairman of the board of DeSoto Inc., that government-encouraged minority hiring programs have shown business the need for low- and moderate-income housing in the suburbs.

Malm made his remarks during a meeting for city officials sponsored by the Des Plaines chapter of the League of Women Voters and the Regional Housing Coalition.

Coalition director Harry N. Gottlieb and northwest coordinator Henry Zuba explained the preliminary details of a newly enacted federal leasing subsidy program to the city officials.

GOTTLIEB SAID that $2.3 billion has been appropriated for the federally sponsored Section 23 leasing program. He indicated final details of the program, which is being established by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development should be released soon. He indicated a number of towns, including Arlington Heights, are studying this proposal.

Under the Section 23 program, a local community could establish its own housing authority or work with a regional agency, such as the Cook County Housing Authority. The authority would certify persons eligible to qualify for the subsidized housing units.

The subsidized housing units would be located in privately owned buildings and no more than 20 per cent of the apartments in any one project could be rented with subsidies.

While complete details of the program have not been prepared, it is possible many apartment developments in the area might not be eligible for the program because of rental prices. Under the Section 23 guidelines, HUD will set fair market rent limits for the program on a county-wide basis.

WHILE MALM indicated the program might have a good effect on enabling minorities in finding housing in suburban towns, Des Plaines Mayor Herbert Behr said he did not believe Section 23 leasing would be a cure-all for low- and moderate-income housing problems.

Behr indicated that he was not opposed to the program and suggested the city might want to initiate such a program on small basis as an experiment.

"There's more than meets the eye with this type of program," the mayor said, adding that the city doesn't have an obligation to provide housing for low- and moderate-income families just to help industry.

The leasing program could be applied to both existing and new apartment developments, according to Gottlieb. He indicated that the Section 23 program should offer local communities more control than other federal housing programs.

Correction

A story in Tuesday's Herald said a Des Plaines man was robbed of $275 Friday by a woman who pointed a revolver at him and fled with a male accomplice with $125 in cash, plus a watch and a ring.

The story should have read that the victim, Donald Amfahr, of 1585 Riverview Ave., was robbed at gunpoint by a man who fled with a woman accomplice. In addition, the holdup loss was $375, not $275, according to Des Plaines police.

Mount Prospect seeks boundary dispute ruling

The Village of Mount Prospect asked a Cook County Circuit Court judge Tuesday to rule in the village's favor in its continuing boundary dispute with the City of Des Plaines.

Clifford L. Weaver, an attorney representing Mount Prospect, filed a motion "for judgment on the pleadings" requesting Judge Arthur L. Dunne to issue a decision based solely on Judge Arthur L. Dunne to issue a decision based solely on documents already filed with the court.

Dunne set a June 4 date to hear arguments on the motion. If the judge grants the motion, Mount Prospect's annexation of property near Elmhurst and Algonquin roads being fought over by the two towns would hold up. If he denies the motion, arguments would proceed on whether Des Plaines' prior annexation of the same pieces of property is valid.

Tuesday's brief discussion in the judge's Civic Center chambers signaled a formal end to out-of-court negotiations between the two municipalities to settle their boundary disagreement.

DES PLAINES CITY Corporation Counsel Robert DiLeonardi told the judge of efforts to reach a compromise. Des Plaines had proposed Elmhurst Road as an east-west dividing line and Oakton Street as a north-south dividing line west of Elmhurst Road. The suggestion was accepted by Mount Prospect, but Des Plaines later backed out, suggesting Oakton be eliminated as a boundary.

"My own personal feeling is it's very unfortunate it fell through the way it has," DiLeonardi said. "I recommended it (passage of the original agreement) very strongly."

Weaver said Mount Prospect "stands already to abide by the agreement we made. If Des Plaines will simply ratify the agreement, we could settle the dispute."

With the failure of out-of-court efforts to reach an agreeable boundary line, resolution apparently will have to come in the courts. The disputed area includes the Waterfall and Terranova restaurants, Colonial apartments and several gas stations. The Waterfall has filed a motion to intervene in the case, to protect its late hour liquor license.

Both communities are anxious to annex the disputed property in order to reap tax benefits and spread their growth.

Ken Uding wins best speaker award

Ken Uding, 766 Therese, Des Plaines, has been named best speaker of the north division of the Toastmasters Club.

A member of the Mount Prospect chapter, he defeated four other contestants in the recent divisional speech contest.

Uding now is eligible to compete for best speaker honors in the Chicago area. The contest will be May 12 at the Marriott Hotel in Rosemont.

Toastmasters is a nonprofit, nonpartisan group providing communication and leadership development.

Studies give way to arts at Maine N.

Readin', writin', and 'rithmetic will give way to mime, music and movies during Maine North High School's two-day "Rites of Spring" festival.

The festival opens Monday morning with an all-school assembly featuring Denis Moffat and the Gospel Singers, a Chicago group. Students will spend the next two days attending workshops presented by professionals in all areas of fine arts — dance, film, music, art, drama, sculpture, poetry and literature.

The festival also will feature evening performances both days with concert pianist Moffat and mimic T. Daniel appearing at 8 p.m. Monday, and the Gus Giordano Contemporary Jazz Dance Company and the Art Hodes Jazz Combo appearing at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

KERMIT LINDBERG, chairman of the Maine North art department, said he conceived the Rites of Spring program as "a way to promote the arts."

"I heard of other schools having artists come in and I thought maybe we could do the same thing in a different way," he said. "We thought the best way would be to set aside two days to present a program of art, music, film, English, theatre and dance."

Instead of classes, students will attend small group performances by the artist of their choice followed by seminars and workshops led by the visiting professionals, Lindberg said.

"The kids are really positive about the program — they seem to like it," he said.

Student interest was strongest in the area of art — jewelry making, sewing and pottery — although the young people signed up for various programs "across the board," according to Lindberg.

PERFORMANCERS at the festival include touring dance groups — ritual African dancers, ballroom dancing and Polynesian dancers — studio artists, concert pianists and members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

Students also will get a chance to meet with pantomimist T. Daniel, a student of Marcel Marceau; jazz musician Art Hodes, a pioneer of Chicago jazz; and Gus Giordano, director of the Gus Giordano Contemporary Jazz Dance Company.

The festival will feature performances by Olivera-Nico, a flamenco dancer and guitarist team, and the Dave Remington Jazz Combo.

LINDBERG SAID he hopes the festival will "create a community awareness in the school and the district."

"I felt that Maine North didn't really have an identity — the school is not complete in the sense of having a fine arts department," he said. "I thought this type of program would help promote the arts — educate the students and create an awareness of the arts."

Chambers of commerce vote to band together

by TONI GINETTI

Local chambers of commerce in the Northwest suburbs have voted to form a Northwest Suburban Chamber of Commerce Assn.

The association, which has been discussed by the local groups since September, will attempt to act as a voice for business and industry in the area. The group may also serve as a lobby in legislative matters dealing with business and industry in the suburbs.

The association Tuesday elected Harry O'Brien, director of the Rolling Meadows Chamber, to head the association. Elected as vice president was Stanley Klyber, of the Elk Grove Assn. of Industry and Commerce; treasurer, Bud Patz, of the Bensenville Chamber; and secretary, Marge Alt, of the Rolling Meadows Chamber.

Committees for the group have also been established. Earl Johnson, executive manager of the Arlington Heights Chamber will head the membership committee; Clarence Schlaver of the Mount Prospect Chamber will serve as publicity chairman and Marion Bauer of the Palatine Chamber will head the special events committee.

O'Brien has been a main force behind organization of the chamber group. He has served as Rolling Meadows Chamber director since June, 1973. Prior to that he had been a district manager for the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce.

O'BRIEN HAS SAID the chamber association may become involved in several projects soon, including extending the limits of the Chicago Trucking Zone to the suburban area. The zone encompasses metropolitan Chicago and a 10-mile radius of the city. In those limits special trucking and freight rates are charged for deliveries to businesses and industries. Rates for deliveries to suburban businesses are substantially higher.

The formation of the association was first discussed last fall among representatives of the Elk Grove, Arlington Heights, Palatine, Wheeling, Mount Prospect, Barrington, Itasca, Bensenville, Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates, Des Plaines, Schaumburg and Rolling Meadows chambers.

The group has drafted bylaws that will be reviewed by local chambers prior to their formal adoption, O'Brien said. The association plans to meet June 18 in Des Plaines.

Most area chamber officials had expressed support for the concept of the association. Johnson said Tuesday he was enthusiastic about the group. "I think that this is a very natural kind of progression," he said.

Salary talks under way here

Teacher contract negotiations in Dist. 62 are apparently off to a good start, according to spokesman for the teacher and board negotiations teams.

Stuart Kisten, chairman of the board negotiations team, said he thought both sides "made some good progress" at a bargaining session Monday night. He said the board presented its counter offer to teacher proposals.

Ray Gurn, chairman of the Des Plaines Education Assn. (DPEA) negotiations team, said he was "quite pleased so far."

"I would say that it was generally a very relaxed atmosphere," he said. "I'm pleased with the way things have been handled this year as compared to the latter part of last year."

BOTH SPOKESMAN declined to comment on details of the negotiations.

The Dist. 62 board and the DPEA reached a settlement in the 1973-74 contract dispute last November, narrowly averting a threatened teachers' strike. A major stumbling block in the 11-month contract dispute was the board's refusal to negotiate nonsalary items, including grievance procedures and teacher representation on committees discussing class size.

Police seeking cat burglars

Police were investigating what appears to be a series of cat burglaries that occurred early Tuesday in the 500 and 600 blocks of Westmere Road in Des Plaines.

Reports were incomplete and police were still conducting checks of the area. Sgt. Kenneth Rottman said muddy footprints of two individuals believed to be burglars were found in and around 13 houses in the neighborhood.

Rottman said the burglars were probably going up one side of a street and down another looking for open doors and windows in houses.

According to one report, burglars broke into the house of Doris Sias, 674 Westmere, by crawling through a basement window after unlocking it. The woman told police she was awakened by noises in her house.

Does suburbia need those new hospitals?

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
First in a series

A hospital building boom is following the population, branching out from the central city and rushing into suburbia.

Schaumburg, Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Barrington top a list of proposed Northwest suburban hospital sites that divides planning experts and excites local civil leaders.

Suburban officials, with eyes on a substantial increase in community services at little direct cost to taxpayers, are greeting the hospital derby with open arms. But, planners are warning that proposed construction will greatly exceed demand for new beds, pushing up hospital costs to all patients.

Seven new hospitals are proposed for suburbs in DuPage, northwest Cook and Lake counties. More than 1,612 new beds are planned. Total construction could exceed $80 million.

THE LIST of proposed projects in metropolitan Chicago, which now has 30,592 hospital beds, includes 30 new hospitals or satellites and grows weekly.

Actual need for hospital construction is a controversy among administrators and health planners. Projections vary, one recently released report shows a need for 94 additional beds in local suburbs by 1979 and another predicts a demand for 750 more beds by 1980.

The Hospital Explosion

Area hospital proposals include:

- Schaumburg: A 180-bed, $12 million satellite of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago was approved in October by the Illinois Hospital Licensing Board. Construction is planned this summer and the hospital is seeking $42 million in low-interest bonds from the Illinois Health Facilities Authority to build tandem projects in Schaumburg and Park Forest.

- Hoffman Estates: A 312-bed, $14.3 million for-profit hospital operated as a franchise of American Mediacorp Inc. of Pennsylvania has received a state permit and opening is expected in early 1976.

- Wheeling: A 228-bed, $11.3 million general hospital proposed by Franklin Boulevard Hospital of Chicago was approved by the licensing board April 10.

- Glendale Heights: A 186-bed, $7.9 million general hospital proposed by Central Community Hospital of Chicago received state approval in December. Central Community is a sister hospital of Franklin Boulevard and the controversial project is similar to the planned facility in Wheeling.

- Barrington: A 226-bed, $11.7 million hospital is planned for fall construction by the Evangelical Hospital Assn. The "Good Shepherd Hospital" will be one of a three-hospital "system" that includes Christ Community Hospital in Oak Lawn and Good Samaritan Hospital under construction in Downers Grove.

- Addison: A 180-bed, $12.5 million hospital is part of a long-range plan by DuPage Memorial Hospital of Elmhurst. The project was approved in December by the state and includes initial construction of an emergency treatment facility and a physician office-clinic.

- Glenview-Northbrook: A 200-bed, $13 million satellite of Evanston Hospital is state approved. The acute-care hospital project drew homeowners' protests during plan commission hearings in January but was annexed and rezoned by the

The breakdown by hospital...

Results of a Northwest Cook County hospital inventory show 1,531 existing beds with a projected need for 94 additional beds, or a total of 1,625. No new hospitals are recommended. The 94 beds could be added to existing facilities, the state hospital plan indicates.

Resurrection	157	4,362

Glenview Village Board April 15.

Mt. Sinai Hospital Medical Center of Chicago and Sherman Hospital of Elgin also are considering suburban expansion. Sherman received licensing board permission April 10 to build a 125-bed, $6 million hospital in Crystal Lake. Mt. Sinai, which has announced plans for a north suburban branch, reportedly has an option for 125-acres at Dundee and Sanders roads in Northbrook.

PREDICTIONS of need for hospital construction are "tricky and controversial," according to Ted Brzyski, Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission health planning officer. Bed need projections are kept secret as "in-house, working" documents by the numerous health-planning agencies that examine hospital construction proposals. Each agency has individual statistics and formulas for determining construction need.

Need for hospital construction "is nothing like the five, six or seven they're talking about," said urbanologist Pierre de Vise, former head of the Chicago Regional Hospital Study. "Unoccupied beds in local hospitals could increase by 20 per cent if all proposed hospitals are built," he said.

The controversy is statistical. Planning agencies use complicated formulas that include estimated future population, daily hospital admissions, number of existing beds, residence and age of patients and type of treatment to estimate need for hospital construction.

The "bible" of bed-need estimates is the Illinois Comprehensive State Health Planning Agency's "Survey and Plan," a bi-annual report designed to guarantee "adequate" health services "without unnecessary duplication."

IN 1972, THE STATE report listed 1,534 existing beds in the Northwest suburban area at Resurrection Hospital in Chicago, Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village, Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights and Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines. Projected six-year bed need for the area was 544 additional beds.

The revised, 1974 state plan, released in preliminary form this month, now shows a need for only 94 additional beds in the area by 1979, despite increased population. Spokesmen for the state said the 450-bed decrease in projected need is caused by changes in the bed-need for-

After 'informal' meeting last night

Devon-53 developers, plan commission still at odds

Devon-53 project group representatives and Elk Grove Village Plan Commission members met "one more time" Tuesday night to discuss the controversial 250-acre project planned for west of Ill. Rte. 53.

The developers' attorney, Robert DiLeonardi, had requested the informal meeting between the group of a dozen or so landowners and village officials. The landowners have proposed a $180 million development for their property.

"At least one more time let's get together to see if we can come up with an economically viable project that will please us both," DiLeonardi had requested.

However, Tuesday's meeting found the Devon-53 landowners and plan commission members still at odds.

PROJECT DENSITY was a main point in dispute. Developers contended that the commission's previous recommendation of six to 10 units per acre was unrealistic, while the commission members said that the developers' proposal of 20 units per acre was unacceptable.

Plan commission chairman Dick McGreenera told the developers he would like to see the land developed totally by one group of developers, instead of being broken up into smaller projects.

One property owner, Phil Zizzo, vice president of the First State Bank of Chicago, said he wants his parcel on Bisner Road to stay with the group plan. "If you have a plan for developing the area we want to build on, tell me so I'll know if I should come to meetings with the group or cut away and develop on my own," he said.

Zizzo said the parcel he owns in unincorporated Cook County is now zoned for single-family and multi-family residences that would allow 29 units per acre. "I'll never build under that zoning. I wouldn't be proud of it, but give our group some encouragement so we'll know what to do," said Zizzo.

CHAIRMAN MCGREENERA encouraged the developers to continue meeting informally with the plan commission "so we can have a plan we can be pleased with."

However, several members of the plan commission were not as hopeful as McGreenera and said they stood by last year's plan commission recommendation to turn down the Devon-53 project.

At press time no future meeting between the two was set.

Developers are Butlitz Land Trust; Joseph Arvidson, vice president of Arvidson Realty Co., Lombard; Ted Szywala, president of Parkway Development Co., Schiller Park; and Joseph Zizzo, vice president of the First State Bank of Chicago. All are represented by attorney Robert DiLeonardi of Des Plaines.

MOST OF THE land for the project is in unincorporated Cook County and thus not subject to village zoning. In the past developers have threatened to build under county zoning if the land is not annexed by Elk Grove Village.

Devon-53 was proposed as a planned unit development (PUD) of single-family homes, condominiums, apartment buildings and commercial businesses, planned for three large tracts west and southwest of the village.

Only credit class in state

Hersey offers judo as a gym course

by WANDALYN RICE

Every high school has some students who believe physical education class is more of a pain in the neck than a way to develop muscles.

At Hersey High School, teacher Wally Barber has found one solution to that problem for at least some students. During the past year Barber, working with Arlington Heights psychologist Donald Tyrell, has taught judo to about 20 Hersey students. It is the only class in the state where high school students can receive credit for studying judo.

The students in the judo class range widely in academic ability, Barber says. But they all tended to dislike, and frequently to skip, their regular PE classes.

BARBER IS A fourth-degree black belt in judo who teaches physical science in addition to judo. Students in his judo class react better to judo than to other kinds of physical education both because they have a chance to choose it and because, Barber says, "it's unique; it's different, and it's an opportunity to develop a skill they normally wouldn't have the opportunity for. It has a feeling of mysticism that's somewhat catching."

While the students may enjoy judo for that reason, Barber and Tyrell agree they also may get some other benefits — benefits they may not be aware of right away.

"One of the goals is to use judo to make yourself a better person," Barber says. "You become a better person through self-discipline and motivation."

Tyrell, who has been one of Barber's students for many years and who holds a second-degree black belt, says he uses judo in some of his therapy, particularly for teen-age boys. "I think there is a connection between the martial arts and mental health," he says.

Judo is good, he says, because it teaches self-discipline. "Judo is the only sport where you are penalized if you hurt the other person and it's your fault," Tyrell says. In addition, in judo "you always protect the lower-ranking belt," he says, and never use superior skill to hurt the other person.

TYRELL HAS WORKED out this year with Barber's judo class, in addition to teaching a class through Harper College and another one through the Dist. 214 continuing education program. He and a substitute teacher took over the class together when Barber went to the national judo competition in Arizona for one week during April.

Next year, Barber will be on leave of absence from Hersey, but the following year, he says he hopes to continue and expand the judo class. The main problem in offering judo, he says, is finding the space in the school's wrestling room.

During the past year, Barber says he has been pleased with the way the class has gone, even though, "sometimes I wasn't conscious of time and I didn't always give the boys enough time to shower."

Hersey Assistant Principal Peter Titre agrees that the program has been a good one. "A lot of kids who were non-attendees in PE have really taken to it," he says. "I'd like to get some girls in it too because I think they'd enjoy it."

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS psychologist Donald Tyrell works out with the Hersey High School judo class, the only class in the state which gives high school credit for the Japanese sport.

Tyrell and Hersey teacher Wally Barber believe the class helps students who previously disliked physical education to develop skills and to learn self-discipline.

Remodeling for 2 junior highs OKd

After more than two weeks of discussion, the Elk Grove Township Elementary Dist. 59 School Board finally approved the controversial remodeling projects at Grove and Dempster junior high schools, officially awarding the contract to Meyer Ross Inc., the low bidder.

The board voted 5 to 0 to favor of awarding the $1,109,160 contract that will allow construction at the two schools to begin this summer. Board members Judy Zanca and Avis Wold abstained from voting.

Mrs. Zanca and Mrs. Wold, who were appointed by Board Pres. Gerald Smiley last week to review the remodeling plans, presented a long list of proposed changes in remodeling plans.

THE LIST INCLUDED money saving ideas such as fewer and less expensive lighting fixtures and carpeting instead of retiling in some areas.

The board approved the bid with the provision that Mrs. Zanca's and Mrs. Wold's suggestions would be discussed with the district's architect.

The two female board members had proposed that only heating and ventilating work be done at the two schools with the rest of the project being entirely revamped and rebid.

They were criticized by some fellow board members for making their proposal as construction was about to begin. The referendum for the remodeling was approved last June and the board hopes to start construction this summer.

The original bid was $1,119,162 which was far below other bids received. After rechecking their bid, due to the large discrepancy, Meyer Ross officials discovered they had omitted items totaling $37,650.

THE COMPANY AGREED to absorb about $10,000 of the loss, with the school district picking up the remaining $27,000, bringing the revised bid to $1,146,502. Construction cuts made by the district brought the bid down by $37,000, to $1,109,160.

The district architect, Tom Kelley, advised against rebidding the project at this time, since constantly rising costs would mean that even with moneysaving cuts in remodeling plans, the project would probably still end up costing the same, if not more.

Acting on board directions, Supt. James Erviti has already trimmed $37,000 from the original remodeling bid while rearranging other costs to allow the district to set up a $65,000 contingency fund from the project.

The low bidder on the project came in substantially higher than expected and it was first thought the project would be about $100,000 short in funds. Interest on the $1,250,000 raised from bonds which were sold to finance the project is expected to make up the difference, however.

Area Chambers vote to form an association

by TONI GINETTI

Local chambers of commerce in the Northwest suburbs have voted to form a Northwest Suburban Chamber of Commerce Assn.

The association, which has been discussed by the local groups since September, will attempt to act as a voice for business and industry in the area. The group may also serve as a lobby in legislative matters dealing with business and industry in the suburbs.

The association Tuesday elected Harry O'Brien, director of the Rolling Meadows Chamber, to head the association. Elected as vice president was Stanley Klyber, of the Elk Grove Assn. of Industry and Commerce; treasurer, Bud Patz, of the Bensenville Chamber; and secretary, Marge Alt, of the Rolling Meadows Chamber.

Committees for the group have also been established. Earl Johnson, executive manager of the Arlington Heights Chamber will head the membership committee; Clarence Schlaver of the Mount Prospect Chamber will serve as publicity chairman and Marion Bauer of the Palatine Chamber will head the special events committee.

O'Brien has been a main force behind organization of the chamber group. He has served as Rolling Meadows Chamber director since June, 1973. Prior to that he had been a district manager for the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce.

O'BRIEN HAS SAID the chamber association may become involved in several projects soon, including extending the limits of the Chicago Trucking Zone to the suburban area. The zone encompasses metropolitan Chicago and a 10-mile radius of the city. In those limits special trucking and freight rates are charged for deliveries to businesses and industries. Rates for deliveries to suburban businesses are substantially higher.

The formation of the association was first discussed last fall among representatives of the Elk Grove, Arlington Heights, Palatine, Wheeling, Mount Prospect, Barrington, Itasca, Bensenville, Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates, Des Plaines, Schaumburg and Rolling Meadows chambers.

The group has drafted bylaws that will be reviewed by local chambers prior to their formal adoption, O'Brien said. The association plans to meet June 18 in Des Plaines.

Most area chamber officials had expressed support for the concept of the association. Johnson said Tuesday he was enthusiastic about the group. "I think that this is a very natural kind of progression," he said.

Suburbs urged to define goals

Northwest suburban business and community leaders must begin immediately to define "suburban goals" and a "suburban strategy" if they are to have a voice in their future, a national political researcher said Tuesday.

Speaking before representatives of local chambers of commerce at the Greenhouse Restaurant in Palatine, Lawrence K. Brainard of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States said there is no common voice speaking in behalf of the 2 million persons living in the suburban Chicago area. Because of that, downstate and Chicago leaders are deciding questions directly affecting the suburbs.

"Without the development of some kind of suburban strategy, the suburban voters will continue to think in terms of the old rural or urban ties without seeing what is best for the suburbs as a unit," Brainard warned. "This kind of splintering will just keep them apart."

BRAINARD, a political and legislative affairs researcher for the U.S. Chamber association and a lobbyist for 35 congressional districts in Illinois and Indiana, said economic growth in the Northwest suburbs in the past decade has made the area "the new economic base of the city of Chicago."

Population in the area in the past 10 years has doubled, he added, but there has been no development of a "suburban conscience."

Suburban officials have remained fragmented and have not worked together effectively for the area good, he said. He said an example of the problem is the suburban opposition to the Regional Transportation Authority, which he said many officials and suburban residents have opposed because they fear it may bring blacks and other minorities to the area.

SEVERAL CHAMBER representatives disputed Brainard, saying the opposition to RTA was based on feelings that the bill did not offer help for the suburbs. But Brainard said the lack of a suburban voice to guide the preparation of the RTA bill resulted in rural downstate leaders and Chicago leaders drafting a bill suited to them. Suburban voters then responded in the only way they knew how, a "no" vote, he said.

Brainard called on the chamber representatives to hold a series of conferences to outline what he called "suburban goals" and then to act as a lobbying group for suburban interests in the state legislature.

THE ART WORK OF students in High School Dist. 214's eight schools is on display this week in the Randhurst Shopping Center mall. The annual art fair also includes displays by the district's practical arts students this year, with a fashion show and cooking demonstration scheduled, in addition to the more traditional works.

Will truancy policy stand up in court?

High School Dist. 211's policy of expelling students for truancy probably would not stand up in court, according to Jean Fisler, a member of the board of education.

Mrs. Fisler spoke during a hearing last week on the district's discipline policy which is now being reviewed by school officials. About 20 persons, attended the meeting including students, teachers, parents and board members.

"My main objection goes to the possibility of expelling a person on school trunancy," said Mrs. Fisler, who said she thinks expulsion is "an inappropriate remedy." The district should keep a student in school and "find other remedies" to the discipline problem, she said.

MRS. FISLER WAS a juvenile and family lawyer in California for 17 years. She told the committee of assistant principals studying the policy that the board has a legal opinion from the district's attorney who says expulsion "would hold up in court for attendance violations alone."

"I firmly believe in pupils being in classes but I don't think this is the remedy to keep them there and I don't think it is gross disobedience under state statute," said Mrs. Fisler. According to the Illinois School Code, a student can only be expelled for "gross disobedience."

Bruce Altergott, associate superintendent, said he believes excessive truancy is gross disobedience. According to the present discipline policy a student can be expelled after the fifth incident of truancy from classes or the third incident of truancy from school. A student who is truant from school is "playing the system," said Altergott, and he knows what the penalty is if he breaks the rule.

FREED HIGH SCHOOL student Jonathan Nelson said he is also opposed to expulsion for truancy. "Suppose a student missed 100 classes a semester and passed the course?" he asked the committee.

Altergott said students must attend school according to state law. If a student studies on his own and doesn't attend class "he could enroll in correspondence courses. He contributes nothing to his classmates," said Altergott.

The discipline policy was changed last year so penalties are spelled out in the policy and not left to the discretion of the discipline officer.

THOMAS HOWARD, associate principal at Schaumburg High School and chairman of the committee, said he is in favor of a policy that spells out penalties. With the present policy a student knows what will happen to him if he breaks a rule and when a discipline officer enforces the rule he is just honoring the decision of the student to take the consequences, said Howard. "A student should have the right to know what will happen to him," he said.

The discipline committee will meet again May 10 at 3:30 p.m. in the district administration center, 1750 S. Roselle Rd., Palatine. The committee is conducting a page-by-page review of the 24-page policy. The committee will discuss student smoking, drug use, suspension and expulsion, and the definition of gross disobedience.

Outlook bright for Clearbrook, new director says

by REGINA OEHLER

"I see us as basically continuing and strengthening our three major programs," said Marc Savard, new executive director of Clearbrook Center in Rolling Meadows.

Clearbrook Center, an educational facility for the mentally retarded, has three major programs — a day-school for children in the Rolling Meadows building, a vocational rehabilitation center for older teen-agers and adults in Elk Grove Village and a community living facility in Arlington Heights.

Savard, 33, formerly assistant to the president at Harper College in Palatine, took over as director of Clearbrook, April 1. After three weeks on the job, he said he's still learning a lot about special education. However, the enthusiastic director has already developed ideas for possible changes.

Marc Savard

BASICALLY, SAVARD said he plans to keep the center programs divided into the three parts. "Within those three areas, we will be looking at modifications, expansions and new programs," he said.

Being planned for next year is a new program for children under three years. The staff will work both with the parents and children, teaching children and giving parents advice on how to teach their children skills such as walking and eating.

Other plans being considered are:

- Formally developing long-range goals for the center. Savard said the staff had some ideas about future plans, such as new programming, but that the center needed some "good, solid" plans for the future in programming and finances.

"I think that the center in the appropriate areas should have some over-all direction and planning and over-all goals," he said.

- Establishing a plan for formal job evaluations, including a definitive job classification system and some kind of a salary system. Savard said this would not necessarily mean a salary schedule.

- Savard said the center will work more closely with the townships, since that is an important revenue source for Clearbrook.

- Joining an accreditation agency that rates facilities that work with the mentally retarded. The agency would visit Clearbrook on a regular basis, studying the programs, making suggestions and rating Clearbrook against similar facilities. It would be similar to the North Central Association evaluations for high school and colleges.

"This would be a very large project for us and it will involve a great deal of work," Savard said.

Clearbrook Center weighs expansion

A study on the need to expand the present Clearbrook Vocational Rehabilitation Center in Elk Grove Village is being made by Clearbrook staff members.

Present projections show that the facility, also called the workshop, will be overcrowded during the next fiscal year which starts July 1.

The workshop is an educational facility for mentally retarded adults and older teen-agers. Students learn assembly line techniques and are paid for each job. Area industries contract out the work to the center.

"We have to decide about Clearbrook's long-range plans in this area," said director Marc Savard. The study will determine how many students the facility will have and what programs will be necessary, according to Savard. It will be presented to the Clearbrook board of directors at the July 17 meeting for a final decision.

IF THE BOARD votes to expand the facility, Savard said the center will be looking for a new site and a larger building. If the board votes against expansion, Savard said Clearbrook will be putting people on a waiting list for the workshop.

Enrollment projections show a total of 134 students in the facility during the next fiscal year. The capacity for the present building is approximately 125 to 130 students, Savard said. Last year's projected enrollment was 99 and to date, there are 110 persons in the program.

According to a report given at the last Clearbrook Center Board Meeting April 22, "It is conceivable that (based on our current population) we may well go over the figure of 134, possibly to 145."

"This is the growth area right now," Savard said. More people are coming in from nursing homes and other sheltered care facilities. The state's new decentralization program is expected to put additional persons into the workshop as they are released from state institutions.

Schools grant parks control of buildings

The school board has officially approved a contract with the Elk Grove Park District that would give the park district jurisdiction over all Elk Grove Village Dist. 59 schools daily after 3:25 p.m. and all day on weekends.

Besides opening up the schools to park district evening programming, school activities after school would be scheduled through the park district.

The contract was approved despite a report from principals and parent group representatives who thought the contract as proposed, "goes too far." It's expected that concerns and possible minor problems cited by the report will be worked out with park district officials.

The park district has operated a pilot program for after school use this year at two village junior highs. Al Stone, principal at Grove Junior High, was at the meeting and termed the park district's school use program as excellent with only a few problems which were worked out.

"We've had a good year and a good relationship with the park district," said Stone.

Board member Avis Wold questioned the 3:25 p.m. takeover time of the park district, asking if it would interfere with turnover school activities.

Supt. James Erviti pointed out that sometime in the future, the park district will be offering extensive recreational programs after school and "it's only natural for their program to start when ours ceases."

Mt. Sinai Hospital Medical Center of Chicago and Sherman Hospital of Elgin also are considering suburban expansion. Sherman received licensing board permission April 10 to build a 125-bed, $6 million hospital in Crystal Lake. Mt. Sinai, which has announced plans for a north suburban branch, reportedly has an option for 125-acres at Dundee and Sanders roads in Northbrook.

PREDICTIONS OF need for hospital construction are "tricky and controversial," according to Ted Brzyski, Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission health planning officer. Bed need projections are kept secret as "in-house, working" documents by the numerous health-planning agencies that examine hospital construction proposals. Each agency has individual statistics and formulas for determining construction need.

Need for hospital construction "is nothing like the five, six or seven they're talking about," said urbanologist Pierre de Vise, former head of the Chicago Regional Hospital Study. "Unoccupied beds in local hospitals could increase by 20 per cent if all proposed hospitals are built," he said.

The controversy is statistical. Planning agencies use complicated formulas that include estimated future population, daily hospital admissions, number of existing beds, residence and age of patients and type of treatment to estimate need for hospital construction.

The "bible" of bed-need estimates is the Illinois Comprehensive State Health Planning Agency's "Survey and Plan," a bi-annual report designed to guarantee "adequate" health services "without unnecessary duplication."

IN 1972, THE STATE report listed 1,534 existing beds in the Northwest suburban area at Resurrection Hospital in Chicago, Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village, Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights and Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines. Projected six-year bed need for the area was 544 additional beds.

The revised, 1974 state plan, released in preliminary form this month, now shows a need for only 94 additional beds in the area by 1979, despite increased population. Spokesmen for the state said the 450-bed decrease in projected need is caused by changes in the bed-need for-

Chambers vote to form an association

by TONI GINETTI

Local chambers of commerce in the Northwest suburbs have voted to form a Northwest Suburban Chamber of Commerce Assn.

Summer high school signup begins today

Registration for summer school classes in Dist. 211 begins today.

Two summer sessions will be offered, one from June 18 through July 11 and one from July 17 through Aug. 2. No tuition is charged but students must pay a $1.50 book rental fee. Students living outside Dist. 211 must pay a $22.50 fee per semester course.

A brochure listing the high school courses will be mailed to the homes of all students enrolled for the coming school year. Copies are also available at each school.

Classes will be held in the mornings at Palatine Fremd, Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates High Schools. Students, including incoming freshmen, should register through the guidance office of their local high school.

Women voters league seeks dollar support

Palatine members of the League of Women Voters are conducting their annual finance drive by asking local businessmen and residents for contributions to support the league's activities during the year.

The organization's members will be making personal visits to local companies and individuals through Thursday. In the past year, the LWV has supported various legislation, sent observers to meetings of elected boards, worked for the Palatine Library referendum, and sponsored various debates and candidates' nights before elections.

More information about the fund drive and the league is available from Alison Best, 397-4795.

The association, which has been discussed by the local groups since September, will attempt to act as a voice for business and industry in the area. The group may also serve as a lobby in legislative matters dealing with business and industry in the suburbs.

The association Tuesday elected Harry O'Brien, director of the Rolling Meadows Chamber, to head the association. Elected as vice president was Stanley Klyber, of the Elk Grove Assn. of Industry and Commerce; treasurer, Bud Patz, of the Bensenville Chamber; and secretary, Marge Alt, of the Rolling Meadows Chamber.

Committees for the group have also been established. Earl Johnson, executive manager of the Arlington Heights Chamber will head the membership committee, Clarence Schlaver of the Mount Prospect Chamber will serve as publicity chairman and Marion Bauer of the Palatine Chamber will head the special events committee.

O'Brien has been a main force behind organization of the chamber group. He has served as Rolling Meadows Chamber director since June, 1973. Prior to that he had been a district manager for the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce.

O'BRIEN HAS SAID the chamber association may become involved in several projects soon, including extending the limits of the Chicago Trucking Zone to the suburban area. The zone encompasses metropolitan Chicago and a 10-mile radius of the city. In those limits special trucking and freight rates are charged for deliveries to businesses and industries. Rates for deliveries to suburban businesses are substantially higher.

The formation of the association was first discussed last fall among representatives of the Elk Grove, Arlington Heights, Palatine, Wheeling, Mount Prospect, Barrington, Itasca, Bensenville, Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates, Des Plaines, Schaumburg and Northwest suburban business and community leaders must begin immediately to define "suburban goals" and a "suburban strategy" if they are to have a voice in their future, a national political researcher said Tuesday.

Speaking before representatives of local chambers of commerce at the Greenhouse Restaurant in Palatine, Lawrence K. Brainard of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States said there is no common voice speaking in behalf of the 2 million persons living in the suburban Chicago area. Because of that, downstate and Chicago leaders are deciding questions directly affecting the suburbs.

"Without the development of some kind of suburban strategy, the suburban voters will continue to think in terms of the old rural or urban ties without seeing what is best for the suburbs as a unit," Brainard warned. "This kind of splintering will just keep them apart."

BRAINARD, a political and legislative affairs researcher for the U.S. Chamber association and a lobbyist for 35 congressional districts in Illinois and Indiana, said economic growth in the Northwest suburbs in the past decade has made the area "the new economic base of the city of Chicago."

Population in the area in the past 10 years has doubled, he added, but there has been no development of a "suburban conscience."

Suburban officials have remained fragmented and have not worked together effectively for the area good, he said. He said an example of the problem is the suburban opposition to the Regional Transportation Authority, which he said many officials and suburban residents have opposed because they fear it may bring blacks and other minorities to the area.

SEVERAL CHAMBER representatives disputed Brainard, saying the opposition to RTA was based on feelings that the bill did not offer help for the suburbs. But Brainard said the lack of a suburban voice to guide the preparation of the RTA bill resulted in rural downstate leaders and Chicago leaders drafting a bill suited to them. Suburban voters then responded in the only way they knew how, a "no" vote, he said.

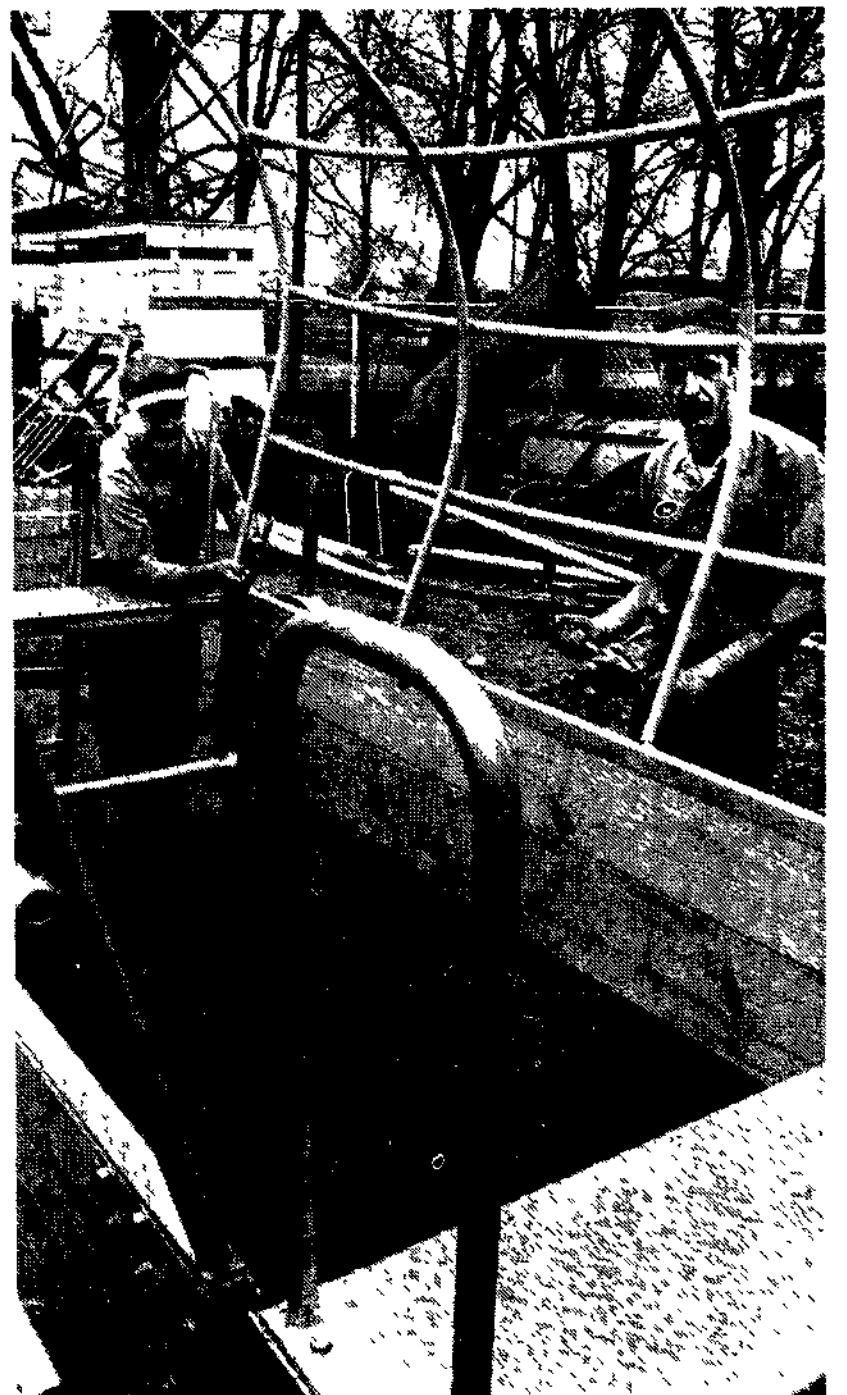

Brainard called on the chamber representatives to hold a series of conferences to outline what he called "suburban goals" and then to act as a lobbying group for suburban interests in the state legislature.

The areas they will need to focus on will include continued economic growth, autonomy from Chicago and improved transportation to and from other suburbs and places where suburbanites work, Brainard said. He said businessmen and municipal governments need to recognize the area's needs, eliminate duplication of services and units to influence decisions being made for the area.

Rolling Meadows chambers.

The group has drafted bylaws that will be reviewed by local chambers prior to their formal adoption, O'Brien said. The association plans to meet June 18 in Des Plaines.

Most area chamber officials had expressed support for the concept of the association. Johnson said Tuesday he was enthusiastic about the group. "I think that this is a very natural kind of progression," he said.

BITS AND WRENCHES are getting fired up for summer, as Palatine Park maintenance men Jack Brady, left, and Tom Jornd fix up a play wagon.

Stavros pleads guilty to 4 federal charges

by LYNN ASINOF

James Stavros pleaded guilty Tuesday in U.S. District Court to extorting a total of $62,000 from three Wheeling developers and filing a false 1972 income tax return.

The guilty pleas came as part of an agreement with the U. S. Attorney's Office in which eight additional courts against Stavros were dropped, including charges of extorting an additional $121,250 from Wheeling developers.

STAVROS, FORMER Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, faces a maximum of 63 years imprisonment and up to $35,000 in fines. Sentencing is scheduled for June 4 before U. S. District Judge Hubert Will.

In changing his plea, Stavros, 43, admitted to:

- Extorting $32,000 from the Zale Construction Co., developers of Lakeside Villas, in the spring of 1971.

- Extorting $30,000 from Bernard Kron of Harmony Builders, developers of Harmony Village, in January 1973.

- Extorting $30,000 with Wheeling Building Dir. William Bieber from the Meister-Neiberg Co., developers of Lake of the Winds, in December 1972.

- Filing a false 1972 income tax return

in which he "substantially understated his income."

The U. S. Attorney's Office gathered massive amounts of evidence of payoffs to Stavros, which was to be presented during the trial scheduled to begin Monday. A bill of particulars filed by the government charged that Stavros extorted more than $300,000 from developers beginning in 1958.

THE GOVERNMENT planned to picture Stavros as an extortionist who threatened his victims with physical harm unless they paid him off. The prosecutors intended to show Stavros' control over key Wheeling positions, which enabled him to threaten developers with permit and construction delays.

The new income tax charge was filed by the U. S. Attorney's Office Tuesday just prior to Stavros' change of plea. The one-count criminal information did not specify how much 1972 income Stavros failed to report.

"We also filed with the court an agreement which was entered into, which in essence stated that he would plead guilty to the things I've described and at the time of disposition the remaining counts would be dismissed," said Asst. U. S.

Outlook bright for Clearbrook: Savard

by REGINA OEHLE

"I see us as basically continuing and strengthening our three major programs," said Marc Savard, new executive director of Clearbrook Center in Rolling Meadows.

Clearbrook Center, an educational facility for the mentally retarded, has three major programs — a day-school for children in the Rolling Meadows building, a vocational rehabilitation center for older teen-agers and adults in Elk Grove Village and a community living facility in Arlington Heights.

Savard, 33, formerly assistant to the president at Harper College in Palatine, took over as director of Clearbrook, April 1. After three weeks on the job, he said he's still learning a lot about special education. However, the enthusiastic director has already developed ideas for possible changes.

BASICALLY, SAVARD said he plans to keep the center programs divided into the three parts. "Within those three areas, we will be looking at modifications, expansions and new programs," he said.

Being planned for next year is a new program for children under three years. The staff will work both with the parents and children, teaching children and giving parents advice on how to teach their children skills such as walking and eating.

Other plans being considered are:

- Formally developing long-range goals for the center. Savard said the

Clearbrook Center weighs expansion

A study on the need to expand the present Clearbrook Vocational Rehabilitation Center in Elk Grove Village is being made by Clearbrook staff members.

Present projections show that the facility, also called the workshop, will be overcrowded during the next fiscal year which starts July 1.

The workshop is an educational facility for mentally retarded adults and older teen-agers. Students learn assembly line techniques and are paid for each job. Area industries contract out the work to the center.

"We have to decide about Clearbrook's long-range plans in this area," said director Marc Savard. The study will determine how many students the facility will have and what programs will be necessary, according to Savard. It will be presented to the Clearbrook board of directors at the July 17 meeting for a final decision.

IF THE BOARD votes to expand the facility, Savard said the center will be looking for a new site and a larger building. If the board votes against expansion, Savard said Clearbrook will be putting people on a waiting list for the workshop.

Enrollment projections show a total of 134 students in the facility during the next fiscal year. The capacity for the present building is approximately 125 to 130 students, Savard said. Last year's projected enrollment was 99 and to date, there are 110 persons in the program.

According to a report given at the last Clearbrook Center Board Meeting April 22, "It is conceivable that (based on our current population) we may well go over the figure of 134, possibly to 145."

"This is the growth area right now," Savard said. More people are coming in from nursing homes and other sheltered care facilities. The state's new decentralization program is expected to put additional persons into the workshop as they are released from state institutions.

more closely with the townships, since that is an important revenue source for Clearbrook.

- Joining an accreditation agency that rates facilities that work with the mentally retarded. The agency would visit Clearbrook on a regular basis, studying the programs, making suggestions and rating Clearbrook against similar facilities. It would be similar to the North Central Association evaluations for high school and colleges.

"This would be a very large project for us and it will involve a great deal of work," Savard said.

Within the village Dawson has been active in establishing the garbage bag program, animal control program, mosquito program Environmental Control Board and blood program.

He came to Palatine eight years ago as a sanitarian and was named director of environmental health six years ago.

In addition to IEHA, Dawson is a member of the National Environmental Health Assn., American Public Health Assn., International Assn. of Milk, Food and Environmental Sanitarians, American Forestry Assn., Royal Society of Health, American Chemical Society and committee chairman of the North Cook Region of the American Red Cross.

Environmental chief 'sanitarian of year'

Richard A. Dawson, Palatine's director of environmental health, was recently named "Illinois Sanitarian of the Year" by the Illinois Environmental Health Assn.

Dawson is only the fifth recipient of the award. He received a traveling plaque and a trophy.

"It was really quite an honor. I was very pleased, honored and humbled all at the same time," said Dawson. "When I accepted this award I also felt I was accepting it on behalf of a lot of other sanitarians as deserving as I was."

Dawson was the first IEHA president to receive the award. His term as president ended this month and he is now serving a three-year term on the board of directors Dawson established and has been editor of the bimonthly "Illinois Sanitarian Newsletter" for the past three years.

During his term as president of IEHA, Dawson helped get April 22-26 declared "Sanitarians' Week in Illinois," presented a clipboard plaque to Gov. Daniel Walker in appreciation of recognition of the sanitarians, was active in lobbying against legislation detrimental to sanitarians, helped rebuild the IEHA health exhibit.

DAWSON ALSO helped state officials rewrite the Illinois Water Well Code and develop a lecture and slide show on private water supply he has presented throughout the state.

Atty. Steven Kadison.

KADISON SAID his office will make known its case against Stavros at the time of sentencing.

Stavros' attorney, Robert J. Butler, said the agreement filed in court provides his client with substantial protection against further prosecutions.

"All pending investigations will be terminated," Butler said. "The U. S. Attorney will not prosecute for any other violations prior to the year 1974. The agreement is quite comprehensive. It covers all pending and contemplated charges and current investigations."

While Butler would not comment on whether Stavros was providing information to the government, he said that the U. S. Attorney's Office might testify to such cooperation at the time of sentencing.

Stavros is the second person to plead guilty to charges stemming from a federal grand jury investigation into alleged shakedown of Wheeling developers and businesses.

MICHAEL VALENZA, former Wheeling trustee, pleaded guilty to conspiring with William Bieber to extort furniture from Wickes, Inc. Stavros also damaged Bieber's defense by pleading guilty in a case where Bieber is co-defendant.

Indictments against Stavros, Bieber, Valenza and three other former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials were returned Jan. 31, following a year-long federal probe.

The prosecution in the Stavros case was handled by Kadison and Howard Stone, assistant U. S. attorneys working under U. S. Atty. James R. Thompson's special investigations division. The investigation was handled by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the intelligence division of the Internal Revenue Service.

Kitchen blaze causes $5,000 damage

Fire and smoke caused an estimated $5,000 damage Tuesday afternoon when a kitchen fire erupted at the home of Curtis O. Taylor, 123 Kimberly Ave., unincorporated Palatine Township.

Palatine Rural firemen were on the scene for 30 minutes. Fire damaged the kitchen, and the rest of the house was damaged by smoke.

Little League candy sale starts Friday

Boys will be selling peanut crunch and mints for $1.25 per box. Bating gloves and sweat shirts will be awarded to boys selling 24 or 48 boxes of candy.

Village urges residents keep creek clear to fight floods

No flooding problems were reported in Palatine last weekend but village officials are seeking residents' help in keeping the creek clear to prevent future flooding problems.

Crews from the public works department and the Metropolitan Sanitary District clean streams work force are out this week cleaning debris from bridges where it is caught and blocking the flow of storm water.

Trustee Robert J. Guss Jr. has called on Palatine residents to help keep the creeks clear by not leaving things on the creek beds, not throwing anything into the creek and helping to police the creek.

Palatine has an ordinance prohibiting anyone from throwing debris into the creek. Persons violating the ordinance are subject to a $500 fine. Guss has asked persons seeing someone violating the ordinance to contact the Palatine Police Department at 358-2131. Children are also urged not to build things along the creek bank or leave toys on the bank because these wash into the creek when the water is high.

"The debris acts like a dam and the water can't get through," said Guss. "The creek has to be clean and flowing for the storm sewers to work and the basements not to flood."

Jehovah's Witnesses to meet

A two-day assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses will be held at William Fremd High School in Palatine Thursday and Friday.

More than 1,200 delegates and their families from 11 congregations in the Northwest suburban area are expected to attend.

Norman Knapp has been elected president of the Palatine Jaycees for 1974.

Does suburbia need those new hospitals?

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
First in a series

A hospital building boom is following the population, branching out from the central city and rushing into suburbia.

Schaumburg, Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Barrington top a list of proposed Northwest suburban hospital sites that divides planning experts and excites local civil leaders.

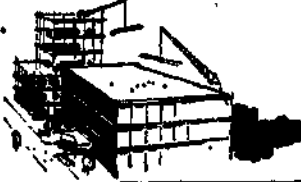

Suburban officials, with eyes on a substantial increase in community services at little direct cost to taxpayers, are greeting the hospital derby with open arms. But, planners are warning that proposed construction will greatly exceed demand for new beds, pushing up hospital costs to all patients.

Seven new hospitals are proposed for suburbs in DuPage, northwest Cook and Lake counties. More than 1,512 new beds are planned. Total construction could exceed $80 million.

THE LIST OF proposed projects in metropolitan Chicago, which now has 30,502 hospital beds, includes 30 new hospitals or satellites and grows weekly.

Actual need for hospital construction is a controversy among administrators and health planners. Projections vary, one recently released report shows a need for 94 additional beds in local suburbs by 1979 and another predicts a demand for 750 more beds by 1980.

The Hospital Explosion

Area hospital proposals include:

- Schaumburg: A 180-bed, $12 million satellite of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago was approved in October by the Illinois Hospital Licensing Board. Construction is planned this summer and the hospital is seeking $42 million in low-interest bonds from the Illinois Health Facilities Authority to build tandem projects in Schaumburg and Park Forest.

- Hoffman Estates: A 312-bed, $14.3 million for-profit hospital operated as a franchise of American Mediacorp Inc. of Pennsylvania has received a state permit and opening is expected in early 1976.

- Wheeling: a 228-bed, $11.3 million general hospital proposed by Franklin Boulevard Hospital of Chicago was approved by the licensing board April 10.

- Glendale Heights: a 188-bed, $7.9 million general hospital proposed by Central Community Hospital of Chicago received state approval in December. Central Community is a sister hospital of Franklin Boulevard and the controversial project is similar to the planned facility in Wheeling.

- Barrington: a 228-bed, $11.7 million hospital is planned for fall construction by the Evangelical Hospital Assn. The "Good Shepherd Hospital" will be one of a three-hospital "system" that includes Christ Community Hospital in Oak Lawn and Good Samaritan Hospital under construction in Downers Grove.

- Addison: a 180-bed, $12.5 million hospital is part of a long-range plan by DuPage Memorial Hospital of Elmhurst. The project was approved in December by the state and includes initial construction of an emergency treatment facility and a physician office-clinic.

- Glenview-Northbrook: a 200-bed, $13 million satellite of Evanston Hospital is state approved. The acute-care hospital project drew homeowners' protests during plan commission hearings in January but was annexed and recouped by the

The controversy is statistical. Planning agencies use complicated formulas that include estimated future population, daily hospital admissions, number of existing beds, residence and age of patients and type of treatment to estimate need for hospital construction.

The "bible" of bed-need estimates is the Illinois Comprehensive State Health Planning Agency's "Survey and Plan," a bi-annual report designed to guarantee "adequate" health services "without unnecessary duplication."

IN 1972, THE STATE report listed 1,534 existing beds in the Northwest suburban area at Resurrection Hospital in Chicago, Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village, Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights and Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines. Projected six-year bed need for the area was 544 additional beds.

The revised, 1974 state plan, released in preliminary form this month, now shows a need for only 94 additional beds in the area by 1979, despite increased population. Spokesmen for the state said the 450-bed decrease in projected need is caused by changes in the bed-need for-

Cultural center plans dumped; high cost cited

Plans for a cultural center for Rolling Meadows have been abandoned.

City officials apparently have decided against pursuing plans for a cultural center in the Kenroy Inc. office complex being built on Algonquin Road and Ill. Rte. 53 because the project would be too expensive, Kenroy spokesman Howard Levinson said Tuesday.

Although he did not quote exact figures, Levinson said "it came to a lot of money and apparently the city was not prepared to underwrite the cost." He added the company now will utilize the rotunda area where the center was planned for commercial space.

Mayor Roland J. Meyer could not be reached for comment on the matter Tuesday.

THE DECISION apparently was made after cost projections prepared in a report by Kenroy were presented to the city. The Skokie firm had been directed to prepare the report in February after a meeting with Meyer, Local homeowners' representatives, school district officials and city aldermen.

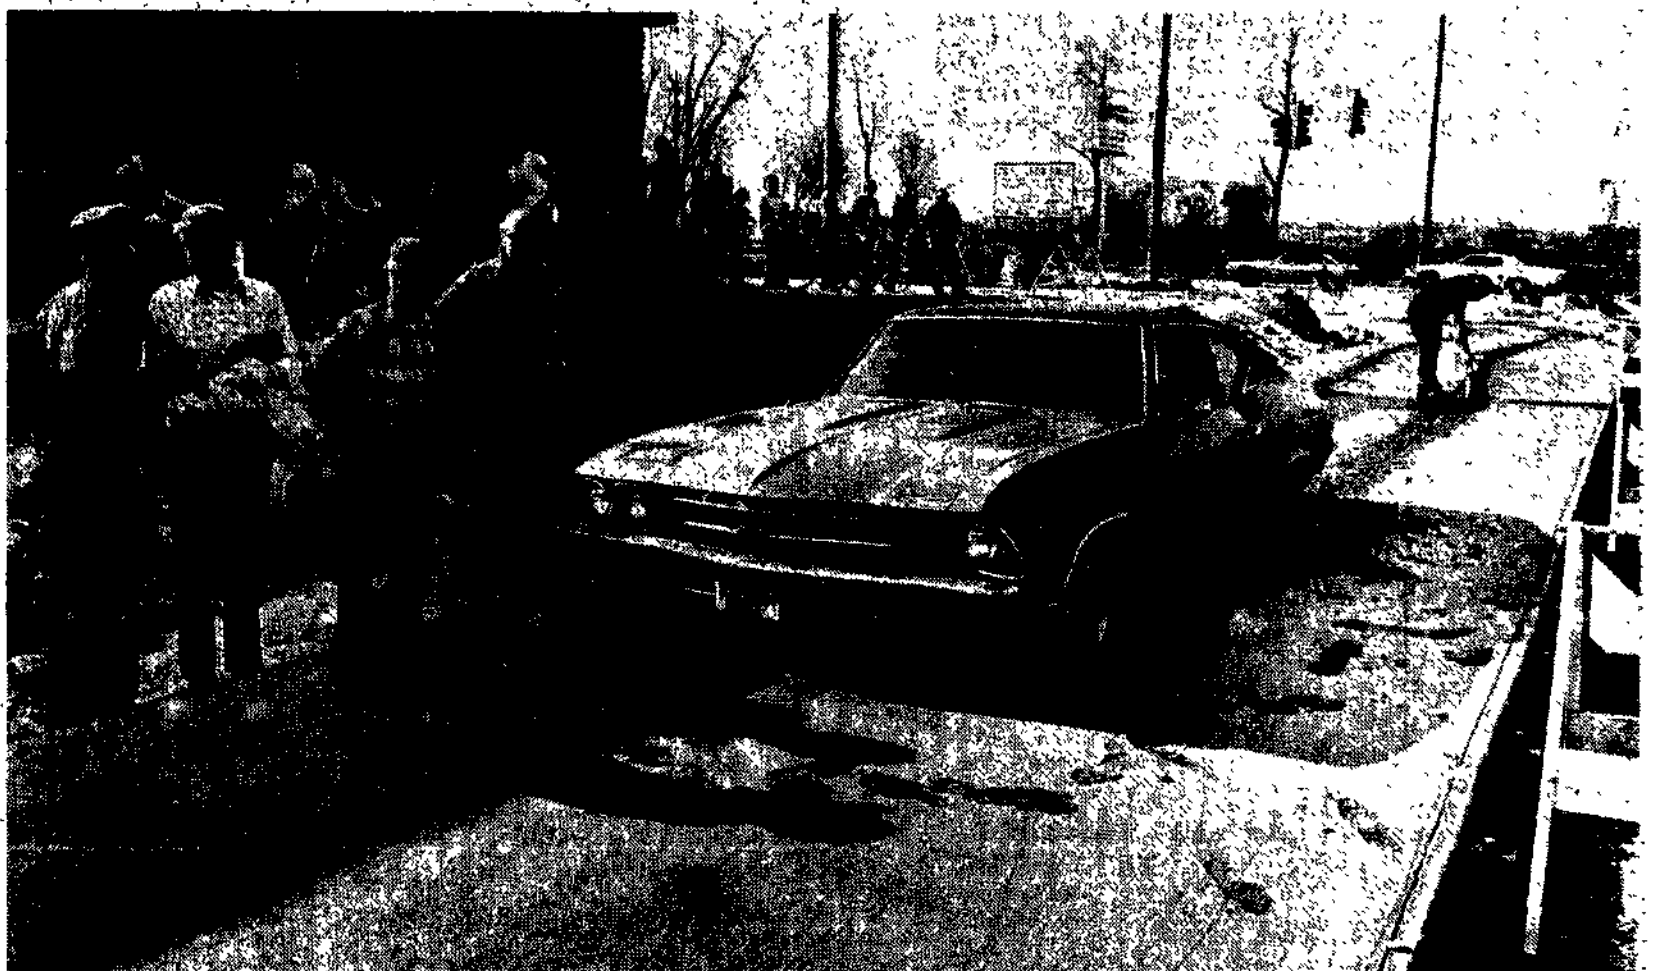

A meeting had been planned Tuesday to consider the cultural center project further, but the meeting was canceled when the decision to drop the proposal was made, Levinson said.

The city first discussed plans for a cultural center in January. The discussions revolved around an offer by Kenroy to lease to the city some 6,000 to 7,000 square feet of space in the rotunda area of the hotel-office complex being built in the city. Suggestions for the center had included providing a theater within it, similar to the Arlington Park Theater.

The 1,000 seat-capacity theater would have accommodated professional acting companies and repertory groups.

An exhibition area for arts and crafts displays had also been suggested for the center.

Meyer had said if the project was feasible, funding for it could come in several ways, including the selling of municipal bonds.

MIKE MASSARI OF Rolling Meadows recently made this deep impression with onlookers at the intersection of Busse and Central roads between

Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights. It took a tow truck and some quick patch-up work by Milburn Brothers construction crews to smooth over the sticky situation. Massari, made a right turn onto Busse Road and went 12 feet along the freshly-poured cement before stopping.

Chambers vote to form an association

Local chambers of commerce in the Northwest suburbs have voted to form a Northwest Suburban Chamber of Commerce Assn.

The association, which has been discussed by the local groups since September, will attempt to act as a voice for business and industry in the area. The group may also serve as a lobby in legislative matters dealing with business and industry in the suburbs.

The association Tuesday elected Harry O'Brien, director of the Rolling Meadows Chamber, to head the association. Elected as vice president was Stanley Klyber, of the Elk Grove Assn. of Industry and Commerce; treasurer, Bud Patz, of the Bensenville Chamber; and secretary, Marge Alt, of the Rolling Meadows Chamber.

Committees for the group have also been established. Earl Johnson, executive manager of the Arlington Heights Chamber will head the membership committee; Clarence Schiavere of the Mount Prospect Chamber will serve as publicity chairman and Marion Bauer of the Palatine Chamber will head the special events committee.

O'Brien has been a main force behind organization of the chamber group. He has served as Rolling Meadows Chamber director since June, 1973. Prior to that he had been a district manager for the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce.

O'BRIEN HAS SAID the chamber association may become involved in several projects soon, including extending the limits of the Chicago Trucking Zone to the suburban area. The zone encompasses metropolitan Chicago and a 10-mile radius of the city. In those limits

by LYNN ASINOF

James Stavros pleaded guilty Tuesday in U.S. District Court to extorting a total of $62,000 from three Wheeling developers and filing a false 1972 income tax return.

The guilty pleas came as part of an agreement with the U. S. Attorney's Office in which eight additional counts against Stavros were dropped, including charges of extorting an additional $121,250 from Wheeling developers.

STAVROS, FORMER Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, faces a maximum of 63 years imprisonment and up to $35,000 in fines. Sentencing is scheduled for June 4 before U. S. District Judge Hubert Will.

In changing his plea, Stavros, 43, admitted to:

- Extorting $32,000 from the Zale Construction Co., developers of Lakeside Villas, in the spring of 1971.

- Extorting $30,000 from Bernard Kron of Harmony Builders, developers of Harmony Village, in January 1973.

- Extorting $30,000 with Wheeling Building Dir. William Bieber from the Meister-Neiberg Co., developers of Lake of the Winds, in December 1972.

- Filing a false 1972 income tax return

in which he "substantially understated his income."

The U. S. Attorney's Office gathered massive amounts of evidence of payoffs to Stavros, which was to be presented during the trial scheduled to begin Monday. A bill of particulars filed by the government charged that Stavros extorted more than $300,000 from developers beginning in 1968.

THE GOVERNMENT planned to picture Stavros as an extortionist who threatened his victims with physical harm unless they paid him off. The prosecutors intended to show Stavros' control over key Wheeling positions, which enabled him to threaten developers with permit and construction delays.

The new income tax charge was filed by the U. S. Attorney's Office Tuesday just prior to Stavros' change of plea. The one-count criminal information did not specify how much 1972 income Stavros failed to report.

"We also filed with the court an agreement which was entered into, which in essence stated that he would plead guilty to the things I've described and at the time of disposition the remaining counts would be dismissed," said Asst. U. S.

special trucking and freight rates are charged for deliveries to businesses and industries. Rates for deliveries to suburban businesses are substantially higher.

The formation of the association was first discussed last fall among representatives of the Elk Grove, Arlington Heights, Palatine, Wheeling, Mount Prospect, Barrington, Itasca, Bensenville, Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates, Des Plaines, Schaumburg and Rolling Meadows chambers.

The group has drafted bylaws that will be reviewed by local chambers prior to their formal adoption, O'Brien said. The association plans to meet June 18 in Des Plaines.

Most area chamber officials had expressed support for the concept of the association. Johnson said Tuesday he was enthusiastic about the group. "I think that this is a very natural kind of progression," he said.

Suburbs urged to define goals: expert

Northwest suburban business and community leaders must begin immediately to define "suburban goals" and a "suburban strategy" if they are to have a voice in their future, a national political researcher said Tuesday.

Speaking before representatives of local chambers of commerce at the Greenhouse Restaurant in Palatine, Lawrence K. Brainard of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States said there is no common voice speaking in behalf of the 2 million persons living in the suburban Chicago area. Because of that, downstate and Chicago leaders are deciding questions directly affecting the suburbs.

"Without the development of some kind of suburban strategy, the suburban voters will continue to think in terms of the old rural or urban ties without seeing what is best for the suburbs as a unit," Brainard warned. "This kind of splintering will just keep them apart."

BRAINARD, a political and legislative affairs researcher for the U.S. Chamber association and a lobbyist for 35 congressional districts in Illinois and Indiana, said economic growth in the Northwest suburbs in the past decade has made the area "the new economic base of the city of Chicago."

Population in the area in the past 10 years has doubled, he added, but there has been no development of a "suburban conscience."

Suburban officials have remained fragmented and have not worked together effectively for the area good, he said. He said an example of the problem is the suburban opposition to the Regional Transportation Authority, which he said many officials and suburban residents have opposed because they fear it may bring blacks and other minorities to the area.

SEVERAL CHAMBER representatives disputed Brainard, saying the opposition to RTA was based on feelings that the bill did not offer help for the suburbs. But Brainard said the lack of a suburban voice to guide the preparation of the RTA bill resulted in rural downstate leaders and Chicago leaders drafting a bill suited to them. Suburban voters then responded in the only way they knew how, a "no" vote, he said.

Brainard called on the chamber representatives to hold a series of conferences to outline what he called "suburban goals" and then to act as a lobbying group for suburban interests in the state legislature.

$30 million Gould Center final OK expected

Final approval is expected to be granted tonight by the Rolling Meadows Plan Commission for the $30 million Gould Center.

Developers of the project on Golf Road near the Northwest Tollway will seek the commission's approval for the second and third phase of development. The first phase of construction on the project, a research and development building for Gould, Inc., has been completed.

Preliminary work has begun on the second phase of development, which will include the construction of a 10-story office tower and a sports complex. Plans for the work were reviewed by the plan commission last month.

PROJECT OFFICIALS have said the second phase, which contains the major portion of development of the project, should be completed by September, 1975. The work will include construction of a 30-foot Pablo Picasso rendering called "The Bather."

The art work will be constructed through a special concrete engraving process developed by Picasso and Norwegian artist Carl Nesjar. Nesjar will supervise the construction of the work, which is scheduled to begin in July.

Some 50 tons of aggregate for the work will be shipped to the United States from a special quarry near Oslo, Norway. The work will be located in the central part of the complex.

Gould, a manufacturer of electronic components, obtained rights to the Picasso work in February after more than a year of negotiations with the Spanish artist and later with executors of his estate following his death in 1973.

THE COMMISSION is also expected to conduct a public hearing on a request by Babbitt and Associates of Rolling Meadows to construct a four-building office complex off Golf Road just west of Algonquin Road.

Final approval of several proposed changes in the Meadowedge condominium project west of Plum Grove School also is expected to be given by the commission. Preliminary work on the project has begun, but approval of several layout changes in the project is required before the development can be completed.

The commission meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the city hall.

by REGINA OEHLE

"I see us as basically continuing and strengthening our three major programs," said Marc Savard, new executive director of Clearbrook Center in Rolling Meadows.

Clearbrook Center, an educational facility for the mentally retarded, has three major programs — a day-school for children in the Rolling Meadows building, a vocational rehabilitation center for older teen-agers and adults in Elk Grove Village and a community living facility in Arlington Heights.

Savard, 33, formerly assistant to the president at Harper College in Palatine, took over as director of Clearbrook, April 1. After three weeks on the job, he said

Marc Savard

Clearbrook Center weighs expansion

A study on the need to expand the present Clearbrook Vocational Rehabilitation Center in Elk Grove Village is being made by Clearbrook staff members.

Present projections show that the facility, also called the workshop, will be overcrowded during the next fiscal year which starts July 1.

The workshop is an educational facility for mentally retarded adults and older teen-agers. Students learn assembly line techniques and are paid for each job. Area industries contract out the work to the center.

"We have to decide about Clearbrook's long-range plans in this area," said director Marc Savard. The study will determine how many students the facility will have and what programs will be necessary, according to Savard. It will be presented to the Clearbrook board of directors at the July 17 meeting for a final decision.

IF THE BOARD votes to expand the facility, Savard said the center will be looking for a new site and a larger building. If the board votes against expansion, Savard said Clearbrook will be putting people on a waiting list for the workshop.

Enrollment projections show a total of 134 students in the facility during the next fiscal year. The capacity for the present building is approximately 125 to 130 students, Savard said. Last year's projected enrollment was 99 and to date, there are 110 persons in the program.

According to a report given at the last Clearbrook Center Board Meeting April 22, "It is conceivable that (based on our current population) we may well go over the figure of 134, possibly to 145."

"This is the growth area right now," Savard said. More people are coming in from nursing homes and other sheltered care facilities. The state's new decentralization program is expected to put additional persons into the workshop as they are released from state institutions.

Being planned for next year is a new program for children under three years. The staff will work both with the parents and children, teaching children and giving parents advice on how to teach their children skills such as walking and eating.

Other plans being considered are:

- Formally developing long-range goals for the center. Savard said the staff had some ideas about future plans, such as new programming, but that the center needed some "good, solid" plans for the future in programming and finances.

"I think that the center in the appropriate areas should have some over-all direction and planning and over-all goals," he said.

- Establishing a plan for formal job evaluations, including a definitive job classification system and some kind of a salary system. Savard said this would not necessarily mean a salary schedule.
- Savard said the center will work more closely with the townships, since that is an important revenue source for Clearbrook.

- Joining an accreditation agency that rates facilities that work with the mentally retarded. The agency would visit Clearbrook on a regular basis, studying the programs, making suggestions and rating Clearbrook against similar facilities. It would be similar to the North Central Association evaluations for high school and colleges.

"This would be a very large project for us and it will involve a great deal of work," Savard said.

Township auditor appointed to board

Palatine Township Auditor Donald G. Bellin, 710 Bayer Dr., unincorporated Palatine Township, was appointed last week to the board of directors of the Town Auditors Assn. of Cook County.

Bellin, who was elected to the Palatine Township board last year, will fill the unexpired term of Ray Manypenny, a Bremen Township official who was appointed vice president of the county organization.

Kitchen blaze causes $5,000 damage

Fire and smoke caused an estimated $5,000 damage Tuesday afternoon when a kitchen fire erupted at the home of Curtis O. Taylor, 123 Kimberly Ave., unincorporated Palatine Township.

The fire apparently started from fumes of a cleaning liquid ignited by a kitchen stove pilot light.

Palatine Rural firemen were on the scene for 30 minutes. Fire damaged the kitchen, and the rest of the house was damaged by smoke.

Atty. Steven Kadison.

KADISON SAID his office will make known its case against Stavros at the time of sentencing.

Stavros' attorney, Robert J. Butler, said the agreement filed in court provides his client with substantial protection against further prosecutions.

"All pending investigations will be terminated," Butler said. "The U. S. Attorney will not prosecute for any other violations prior to the year 1974. The agreement is quite comprehensive. It covers all pending and contemplated charges and current investigations."

While Butler would not comment on whether Stavros was providing information to the government, he said that the U. S. Attorney's Office might testify to such cooperation at the time of sentencing.

Stavros is the second person to plead guilty to charges stemming from a federal grand jury investigation into alleged shakedowns of Wheeling developers and businesses.

MICHAEL VALENZA, former Wheeling trustee, pleaded guilty to conspiring with William Bieber to extort furniture from Wickes, Inc. Stavros also damaged Bieber's defense by pleading guilty in a case where Bieber is co-defendant.

Indictments against Stavros, Bieber, Valenza and three other former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials were returned Jan. 31, following a year-long federal probe.

The prosecution in the Stavros case was handled by Kadison and Howard Stone, assistant U. S. attorneys working under U. S. Atty. James R. Thompson's special investigations division. The investigation was handled by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the intelligence division of the Internal Revenue Service.

Does suburbia need those new hospitals?

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
First in a series

A hospital building boom is following the population, branching out from the central city and rushing into suburbia.

Schaumburg, Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Barrington top a list of proposed Northwest suburban hospital sites that divides planning experts and excites local civil leaders.

Suburban officials, with eyes on a substantial increase in community services at little direct cost to taxpayers, are greeting the hospital derby with open arms. But, planners are warning that proposed construction will greatly exceed demand for new beds, pushing up hospital costs to all patients.

Seven new hospitals are proposed for suburbs in DuPage, northwest Cook and Lake counties. More than 1,812 new beds are planned. Total construction could exceed $80 million.

THE LIST OF proposed projects in metropolitan Chicago, which now has 30,592 hospital beds, includes 30 new hospitals or satellites and grows weekly.

Actual need for hospital construction is a controversy among administrators and health planners. Projections vary, one recently released report shows a need for 94 additional beds in local suburbs by 1979 and another predicts a demand for 750 more beds by 1980.

Area hospital proposals include:

• Schaumburg: A 180-bed, $12 million satellite of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago was approved in October by the Illinois Hospital Licensing Board. Construction is planned this summer and the hospital is seeking $42 million in low-interest bonds from the Illinois Health Facilities Authority to build tandem projects in Schaumburg and Park Forest.

• Hoffman Estates: A 312-bed, $14.3 million for-profit hospital operated as a franchise of American Mediacorp Inc. of Pennsylvania has received a state permit and opening is expected in early 1975.

• Wheeling: A 228-bed, $11.3 million general hospital proposed by Franklin Boulevard Hospital of Chicago was approved by the licensing board April 10.

• Glendale Heights: A 188-bed, $7.9 million general hospital proposed by Central Community Hospital of Chicago received state approval in December. Central Community is a sister hospital of Franklin Boulevard and the controversial project is similar to the planned facility in Wheeling.

• Barrington: A 226-bed, $11.7 million hospital is planned for fall construction by the Evangelical Hospital Assn. The "Good Shepherd Hospital" will be one of a three-hospital "system" that includes Christ Community Hospital in Oak Lawn and Good Samaritan Hospital under construction in Downers Grove.

• Addison: A 180-bed, $12.5 million hospital is part of a long-range plan by DuPage Memorial Hospital of Elmhurst. The project was approved in December by the state and includes initial construction of an emergency treatment facility and a physician office-clinic.

• Glenview-Northbrook: A 200-bed, $13 million satellite of Evanston Hospital is state approved. The acute-care hospital project drew homeowners' protests during plan commission hearings in January but was annexed and rezoned by the

The breakdown by hospital...

Results of a Northwest Cook County hospital inventory show 1,531 existing beds with a projected need for 94 additional beds, or a total of 1,625. No new hospitals are recommended. The 34 beds could be added to existing facilities, the state hospital plan indicates.

Resurrection	157	4,362

Glenview Village Board April 15.

Mt. Sinai Hospital Medical Center of Chicago and Sherman Hospital of Elgin also are considering suburban expansion. Sherman received licensing board permission April 10 to build a 125-bed, $6 million hospital in Crystal Lake. Mt. Sinai, which has announced plans for a north suburban branch, reportedly has an option for 125-acres at Dundee and Sanders roads in Northbrook.

PREDICTIONS OF need for hospital construction are "tricky and controversial," according to Ted Brzyski, Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission health planning officer. Bed need projections are kept secret as "in-house, working" documents by the numerous health-planning agencies that examine hospital construction proposals. Each agency has individual statistics and formulas for determining construction need.

Need for hospital construction "is nothing like the five, six or seven they're talking about," said urbanologist Pierre de Vise, former head of the Chicago Regional Hospital Study. "Unoccupied beds in local hospitals could increase by 20 per cent if all proposed hospitals are built," he said.

The controversy is statistical. Planning agencies use complicated formulas that include estimated future population, daily hospital admissions, number of existing beds, residence and age of patients and type of treatment to estimate need for hospital construction.

The "bible" of bed-need estimates is the Illinois Comprehensive State Health Planning Agency's "Survey and Plan," a bi-annual report designed to guarantee "adequate" health services "without unnecessary duplication."

IN 1972, THE STATE report listed 1,534 existing beds in the Northwest suburban area at Resurrection Hospital in Chicago, Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village, Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights and Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines. Projected six-year bed need for the area was 544 additional beds.

The revised, 1974 state plan, released in preliminary form this month, now shows a need for only 94 additional beds in the area by 1979, despite increased population. Spokesmen for the state said the 450-bed decrease in projected need is caused by changes in the bed-need for-

Municipal fire department delay until Dec. 1

A municipal fire department will not exist in Hoffman Estates until about Dec. 1, three months later than village officials had anticipated.

A proposed schedule for transfer of territory from four fire protection districts to village control was announced last night at a joint fire study committee meeting by village attorneys Edward Hoffer and George Knickerbocker. Arthur Zimmerman, attorney for the Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District, agreed with the transfer.

"I was surprised and disappointed," said committee chairman Dyrle Rathman, village trustee. September 1 was the target date village officials had set to complete the transfer.

HOWEVER, THE first step in the changeover could be underway by Tuesday in the procedure outlined by the three attorneys.

Petitions are to be delivered to the village Friday for circulation after Monday night's village board meeting in the area of the Winston-Knoles subdivision of Hoffman Estates, now served by the Palatine Rural Fire Protection District.

The village board is to approve a resolution Monday committing itself to accept financial responsibility for the district, if subsequent steps are acceptable.

The petitions will seek a Cook County Circuit Court order for a referendum in which Winston-Knoles area voters would be asked to authorize the transfer to the current Hoffman Estates fire district.

The referendum would be held within 60 days of the court order. The transfer could be completed by July or August.

CONCURRENT with the Winston-Knoles transfer, areas on the western edge of the village would be annexed to the Hoffman Estates district, through petitions, without a referendum.

The second step, assumption of the fire protection district by the village likely will take until December because of the need to inventory assets and property then owned by the district.

During the first year after the transfer the fire district would not be legally disbanded because of anticipated delays in changing county tax records. The district would still exist as a taxing agency for areas to be served by the municipal department, but outside village boundaries.

Chambers vote to form an association

Suburbs urged to define goals

Northwest suburban business and community leaders must begin immediately to define "suburban goals" and a "suburban strategy" if they are to have a voice in their future, a national political researcher said Tuesday.

Speaking before representatives of local chambers of commerce at the Greenhouse Restaurant in Palatine, Lawrence K. Brainard of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States said there is no common voice speaking in behalf of the 2 million persons living in the suburban Chicago area. Because of that, downstate and Chicago leaders are deciding questions directly affecting the suburbs.

"Without the development of some kind of suburban strategy, the suburban voters will continue to think in terms of the old rural or urban ties without seeing what is best for the suburbs as a unit," Brainard warned. "This kind of splintering will just keep them apart."

Brainard called on the chamber representatives to hold a series of conferences to outline what he called "suburban goals" and then to act as a lobbying group for suburban interests in the state legislature.

The areas they will need to focus on will include continued economic growth, autonomy from Chicago and improved transportation to and from other suburbs and places where suburbanites work, Brainard said.

New hospital to include pediatrics

American Mediacorp Inc. will include a small pediatrics unit in the final plans for the 312-bed Community Hospital of Hoffman Estates, Terry Schuessler, AMI administrator, said.

Specific dimensions of the unit have not been determined, Schuessler said.

The "very preliminary plan" of the hospital designed by AMI has been presented to the village hospital committee and a few doctors who are thinking of staffing the hospital, he noted. Their recommendations on the project will be forwarded to the hospital developer's architects for inclusion in the plan, the administrator said.

THE PEDIATRICS unit will include a crib room, play room and additional isolation rooms. The rest of the floor will be made up of regular hospital rooms that could be used by youngsters or adults. These rooms would be used for children should there be an influx of young patients, Schuessler said.

A preliminary plan presented to the village hospital committee about two weeks ago did not include designated space for a pediatrics ward.

Preliminary plans for the hospital call for medical, surgical and obstetrical departments on four floors. The ground level will be devoted to emergency and outpatient services with six major operating rooms next to intensive and coronary care facilities, plans show.

Also on the first floor, are laboratory, pharmacy, radiology and subsidiary services, along with kitchen-dining areas, according to the plans.

Construction is expected to begin in late fall. Officials have predicted completion of the hospital to be 18 to 24 months after groundbreaking.

Hoffman Plaza holds grand opening

Grand opening festivities are under way at Hoffman Plaza Shopping Center, Golf and Roselle roads, Hoffman Estates.

After reconstruction at the center, grand openings for new stores are being held Wednesday through Sunday. Balloons and treats will be given to children by clowns throughout the center, and stores are holding sales.

The plaza includes a restaurant and stores for liquor, jewelry, health and beauty aids, supermarket and drugs, hardware and sporting goods, women's apparel, men's furnishings, vitamins, pets, real estate, televisions, tires, pizza and a beauty shop.

State Senate hearing May 8

Illegal license for RPSL branch?

A State Senate subcommittee will hold a hearing at 9 a.m. May 8 in Springfield to learn if there were any improprieties involved in preliminary licensing for the planned Schaumburg branch of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center.

Dr. Mark Lepper, director of the state comprehensive health planning agency, is scheduled to testify before the five-member subcommittee, which is probing his role, if any, in approval for the 180-bed hospital planned for Schaumburg Road just west of Roselle Road. The hearing will be in Room A2 in the State Office Building.

State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, who will chair the committee, last June won approval of his resolution calling for a subcommittee to investigate possible conflict of interest in the licensing of the facility.

LEPPER, A PROFESSOR on the RPSL payroll, told a staff researcher he had no part in the RPSL-North approval and indicated he referred the matter to Dr. Joyce Lashof, director of the Illinois Department of Public Health.

Dr. Lashof, who also was on the RPSL payroll in a less active capacity than Lepper, apparently signed the permit, Regner said.

Regner described the referral of the preliminary licensing to the department of health as irregular. He noted during Richard Ogilvie's term as governor, approval was given by the state director of the comprehensive health-planning agency.

Regner added Dr. Lashof is not slated to speak to the subcommittee, but that she is welcome to testify.

The first hearing of the subcommittee was conducted last September. Area residents, a Hoffman Estates official administrator from a nearby hospital commented on site selection of the proposed RPSL-North on area health-care facilities.

THE SECOND hearing was called to accommodate Lepper, who could not make the first hearing, held at Harper College.

Regner said nothing had been decided from the testimony at the first hearing and that the information might be forwarded to another legislative committee studying "certificate of need" legislation — where need for a facility would have to be determined before a hospital could be constructed.

Other members of the subcommittee include State Senators Jack Schaffer, R-Cary; James Bell, R-Joliet; Dawn Clark Netsch, D-Chicago; and Richard Newhouse, D-Chicago.

A seminar on opportunities for gifted students in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 will be presented at 7:30 p.m. today at Helen Keller Junior High School, 820 Bode Rd., Schaumburg. Gifted students' programs, qualifications and evaluation methods will be discussed.

For information contact Bernard Lucier, Dirksen School principal, at 529-7030.

Emergency training program

A special emergency training program will be presented by Schaumburg firemen and policemen, starting May 6.

There will be two nights of medical training to handle cases like non-breathing or cardiac arrest. Firemen will also inform participants on how to handle fires in home or car or on clothing. Police will give instructions on how to report an incident and what to do.

The program will be conducted at the Great Hall, 231 S. Civic Dr., Schaumburg. The training will be from 7 to 10:30 p.m. on May 6, 13, 20 and 27.

Firefighter Art Stoike said the program for adults is an intensified version of the department's established baby-sitter emergency program.

Applications may be picked up from the two fire stations or police departments. The sessions can accommodate from 65 to 70 persons. There is no fee.

Parks seek extension

Schaumburg Park District recreation officials will ask School Dist. 54 for an extension of a school-use deadline that might affect about a third of its summer programs.

Duane Hosmer, superintendent of recreation, told the park board recently that Dist. 54 officials said school buildings would be closed Aug. 2 so that they could be cleaned before the school year.

Hosmer said if the Aug. 2 deadline was maintained, it would cause staff assignment problems for the park district.

Lions smoker Friday

Schaumburg Lions Club will hold its annual smoker at 8 p.m. Friday at the Maitre d' Restaurant, 111 E. Higgins Rd., Elk Grove.

The Lions are issuing an invitation to all Schaumburg residents interested in joining the organization.

Lions support activities of the blind and their annual Candy Day proceeds are distributed to various blind organizations with most of the funds channeled to local community needs, the spokesman explained.

For information contact Jerry Rodway, 529-2279, or Mel Schwartz, 529-2833.

New method helps in hiring of teachers

by JUDY JOBBITT

Good teachers may be hard to find. But it can be even harder to select the best among this group.

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 is using a new technique to help determine the best applicants for teaching positions in the district.

The system was developed by Selective Research Institute Inc. at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln. It offers a structured interview with set questions. The interviewers have predetermined answers they seek with each question.

This method still does not eliminate the important qualities of personality and ability to relate to others, said Ronald Ruble, assistant superintendent in charge of personnel. However, it does allow each candidate to be judged on the same basis, he said.

THE SRI PROGRAM was developed after interviews of 1,500 "successful teachers" who were recommended by students, other teachers and their supervisors. Two psychologists at the university developed a list of attributes apparent in these teachers and developed the questions accordingly.

About 150 teachers must be recruited for Dist. 54 next year. This figure includes the additional 75 teaching staff members and specialists approved by the school board recently. Next year there will be about 885 teachers.

Each year the district receives about 5,000 inquiries from prospective teachers. From these inquiries, about 550 are requested to come for interviews.

Because of the large number of applicants, Ruble said he looked for a better means of evaluating the interviews. SRI provided one answer.

RUBLE ATTENDED two training workshops at the university to learn how to interpret interview results. He also received practice tapes from the institute, which he decoded and used to match results with his own. The cost of the sessions and tapes was about $800.

Ruble intends to hold workshops with principals and other administrators involved in recruitment to teach them the process.

He said the interview tapes can be sent directly to SRI for analysis, a method many school districts use. The cost for analysis is about $30 per tape.

ONE PROBLEM Dist. 54 has found in recruiting teachers, he said, is attracting minority applicants. Part of the problem now is the restriction forbidding information about sex or racial/nationality background on the application.

"This makes it difficult if you want to hire a minority, to know which they're," said Ruble.

The district has not been told it is "out of balance" with minority representation at this time, he said. He pointed out the current minority personnel fairly represents the community.

Nonetheless, Mexican-Americans and blacks are difficult to find, he said. Few inquiries are received from either minority despite extra attempts by Ruble to contact universities and schools where these minorities attend to notify them about open positions.

Wheeling politician pleads guilty

by LYNN ASINOF

James Stavros pleaded guilty Tuesday in U.S. District Court to extorting a total of $62,000 from three Wheeling developers and filing a false 1972 income tax return.

The guilty pleas came as part of an agreement with the U. S. Attorney's Office in which eight additional counts against Stavros were dropped, including charges of extorting an additional $121,250 from Wheeling developers.

STAVROS, FORMER Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, faces a maximum of 63 years imprisonment and up to $35,000 in fines. Sentencing is scheduled for June 4 before U. S. District Judge Hubert Will.

In changing his plea, Stavros, 43, admitted to:

- Extorting $32,000 from the Zale Construction Co., developers of Lakeside Villas, in the spring of 1971.

- Extorting $30,000 from Bernard Kron of Harmony Builders, developers of Harmony Village, in January 1973.

- Extorting $30,000 with Wheeling

Building Dir. William Bieber from the Meister-Neiberg Co., developers of Lake of the Winds, in December 1972.

- Filing a false 1972 income tax return in which he "substantially understated his income."

The U. S. Attorney's Office gathered massive amounts of evidence of payoffs to Stavros, which was to be presented during the trial scheduled to begin Monday. A bill of particulars filed by the government charged that Stavros extorted more than $300,000 from developers beginning in 1958.

THE GOVERNMENT planned to picture Stavros as an extortionist who threatened his victims with physical harm unless they paid him off. The prosecutors intended to show Stavros' control over key Wheeling positions, which enabled him to threaten developers with permit and construction delays.

The new income tax charge was filed by the U. S. Attorney's Office Tuesday just prior to Stavros' change of plea. The one-count criminal information did not specify how much 1972 income Stavros failed to report.

"We also filed with the court an agreement which was entered into, which in essence stated that he would plead guilty to the things I've described and at the time of disposition the remaining counts would be dismissed," said Asst. U. S. Attorney Steven Kadison.

KADISON SAID his office will make known its case against Stavros at the time of sentencing.

Stavros' attorney, Robert J. Butler, said the agreement filed in court provides his client with substantial protection against further prosecutions.

"All pending investigations will be terminated," Butler said. "The U. S. Attorney will not prosecute for any other violations prior to the year 1974. The agreement is quite comprehensive. It covers all pending and contemplated charges and current investigations."

While Butler would not comment on whether Stavros was providing information to the government, he said that the U. S. Attorney's Office might testify to such cooperation at the time of sentencing.

Stavros is the second person to plead guilty to charges stemming from a federal grand jury investigation into alleged shakedown of Wheeling developers and businesses.

MICHAEL VALENZA, former Wheeling trustee, pleaded guilty to conspiring with William Bieber to extort furniture from Wickes, Inc. Stavros also damaged Bieber's defense by pleading guilty in a case where Bieber is co-defendant.

Indictments against Stavros, Bieber, Valenza and three other former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials were returned Jan. 31, following a year-long federal probe.

The prosecution in the Stavros case was handled by Kadison and Howard Stone, assistant U. S. attorneys working under U. S. Atty. James R. Thompson's special investigations division. The investigation was handled by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the intelligence division of the Internal Revenue Service.

Blood donation drive scheduled for May 19

A blood donation drive has been scheduled from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. May 19 in Hoffman Estates.

The blood replacement plan provides blood to any village resident as needed after surgery or to meet demands of illness or injury. To continue as a member of the North Suburban Blood Center in Northbrook, the blood bank through which village donations and blood needs are handled, 4 per cent of all village residents must donate blood during a 12-month period. Coverage for blood replacement extends to unmarried children of residents, up to age 25, whether they live at home or elsewhere.

The 1974-75 goal for Hoffman Estates is 1,200 pints. In the first and only drive this year, 143 pints were donated. The current operating year expires next February.

ANY RESIDENT may donate if he or she is in good health, age 18 to 65, and has no history of diabetes, hepatitis, tuberculosis, heart disease, asthma, malignancy or open skin rashes. Potential donors with any question about their eligibility should check with their physicians.

Donations will be taken in the village municipal building, 1200 N. Gannon Dr., Hoffman Estates. Appointments may be made in advance, to help eliminate any time wait, or donors may attend without appointments. Times may be scheduled through Amy Badal, 865-9208, or the Hoffman Estates Health Department in the municipal building, 882-9100.

Residents who need blood should contact the health department at the municipal building phone number or the North Suburban Blood Center, 498-9940.

Clearbrook outlook appears bright, new director says

by REGINA OEHLER

"I see us as basically continuing and strengthening our three major programs," said Marc Savard, new executive director of Clearbrook Center in Rolling Meadows.

Clearbrook Center, an educational facility for the mentally retarded, has three major programs — a day-school for children in the Rolling Meadows building, a vocational rehabilitation center for older teen-agers and adults in Elk Grove Village and a community living facility in Arlington Heights.

Savard, 33, formerly assistant to the president at Harper College in Palatine, took over as director of Clearbrook, April 1. After three weeks on the job, he said he's still learning a lot about special education. However, the enthusiastic director has already developed ideas for possible changes.

BASICALLY, SAVARD said he plans to keep the center programs divided into the three parts. "Within those three areas, we will be looking at modifications, expansions and new programs," he said.

Being planned for next year is a new program for children under three years.

The staff will work both with the parents and children, teaching children and giving parents advice on how to teach their children skills such as walking and eating.

Other plans being considered are:

- Formally developing long-range goals for the center. Savard said the staff had some ideas about future plans, such as new programming, but that the center needed some "good, solid" plans for the future in programming and finances.

"I think that the center in the appropriate areas should have some over-all direction and planning and over-all goals," he said.

- Establishing a plan for formal job evaluations, including a definitive job classification system and some kind of a salary system. Savard said this would not necessarily mean a salary schedule.

Does suburbia need those new hospitals?

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
First in a series

A hospital building boom is following the population, branching out from the central city and rushing into suburbia.

Schaumburg, Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Barrington top a list of proposed Northwest suburban hospital sites that divides planning experts and excites local civil leaders.

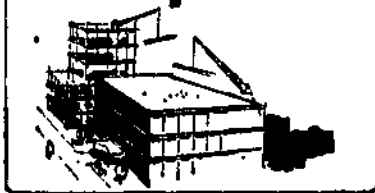

Suburban officials, with eyes on a substantial increase in community services at little direct cost to taxpayers, are greeting the hospital derby with open arms. But, planners are warning that proposed construction will greatly exceed demand for new beds, pushing up hospital costs to all patients.

Seven new hospitals are proposed for suburbs in DuPage, northwest Cook and Lake counties. More than 1,512 new beds are planned. Total construction could exceed $80 million.

THE LIST OF proposed projects in metropolitan Chicago, which now has 30,502 hospital beds, includes 30 new hospitals or satellites and grows weekly.

Actual need for hospital construction is a controversy among administrators and health planners. Projections vary, one recently released report shows a need for 94 additional beds in local suburbs by 1979 and another predicts a demand for 750 more beds by 1980.

The Hospital Explosion

Area hospital proposals include:

- Schaumburg: A 180-bed, $12 million satellite of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago was approved in October by the Illinois Hospital Licensing Board. Construction is planned this summer and the hospital is seeking $42 million in low-interest bonds from the Illinois Health Facilities Authority to build tandem projects in Schaumburg and Park Forest.
- Hoffman Estates: A 312-bed, $14.3 million for-profit hospital operated as a franchise of American Mediacorp Inc. of Pennsylvania has received a state permit and opening is expected in early 1976.

• Wheeling: a 228-bed, $11.3 million general hospital proposed by Franklin Boulevard Hospital of Chicago was approved by the licensing board April 10.

• Glendale Heights: a 186-bed, $7.9 million general hospital proposed by Central Community Hospital of Chicago received state approval in December. Central Community is a sister hospital of Franklin Boulevard and the controversial project is similar to the planned facility in Wheeling.

• Barrington: a 228-bed, $11.7 million hospital is planned for fall construction by the Evangelical Hospital Assn. The "Good Shepherd Hospital" will be one of a three-hospital "system" that includes Christ Community Hospital in Oak Lawn and Good Samaritan Hospital under construction in Downers Grove.

• Addison: a 180-bed, $12.5 million hospital is part of a long-range plan by DuPage Memorial Hospital of Elmhurst. The project was approved in December by the state and includes initial construction of an emergency treatment facility and a physician office-clinic.

• Glenview-Northbrook: a 200-bed, $13 million satellite of Evanston Hospital is state approved. The acute-care hospital project drew homeowners' protests during plan commission hearings in January but was annexed and rezoned by the

The breakdown by hospital...

Results of a Northwest Cook County hospital inventory show 1,531 existing beds with a projected need for 94 additional beds, or a total of 1,625. No new hospitals are recommended. The 94 beds could be added to existing facilities, the state hospital plan indicates.

Hospital	Existing Beds	1973 Admissions
Northwest Community	433	14,437
Resurrection	157	4,362
Holy Family	240	9,210
Alexian Brothers	302	14,344

Glenview Village Board April 15.

Mt. Sinai Hospital Medical Center of Chicago and Sherman Hospital of Elgin also are considering suburban expansion. Sherman received licensing board permission April 10 to build a 125-bed, $8 million hospital in Crystal Lake. Mt. Sinai, which has announced plans for a north suburban branch, reportedly has an option for 125-acres at Dundee and Sanders roads in Northbrook.

PREDICTIONS OF need for hospital construction are "tricky and controversial," according to Ted Brzyski, Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission health planning officer. Bed need projections are kept secret as "in-house, working" documents by the numerous health-planning agencies that examine hospital construction proposals. Each agency has individual statistics and formulas for determining construction need.

Need for hospital construction "is nothing like the five, six or seven they're talking about," said urbanologist Pierre de Vise, former head of the Chicago Regional Hospital Study. "Unoccupied beds in local hospitals could increase by 20 per cent if all proposed hospitals are built," he said.

The controversy is statistical. Planning agencies use complicated formulas that include estimated future population, daily hospital admissions, number of existing beds, residence and age of patients and type of treatment to estimate need for hospital construction.

The "bible" of bed-need estimates is the Illinois Comprehensive State Health Planning Agency's "Survey and Plan," a bi-annual report designed to guarantee "adequate" health services "without unnecessary duplication."

IN 1972, THE STATE report listed 1,534 existing beds in the Northwest suburban area at Resurrection Hospital in Chicago, Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village, Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights and Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines. Projected six-year bed need for the area was 544 additional beds.

The revised, 1974 state plan, released in preliminary form this month, now shows a need for only 94 additional beds in the area by 1979, despite increased population. Spokesmen for the state said the 450-bed decrease in projected need is caused by changes in the bed-need for-

Homeowners urge fight against unwanted zoning

by MARCIA KRAMER

Residents of northeast Mount Prospect have issued an appeal to other homeowners to help fight unwanted zoning in order to "keep Mount Prospect looking like the area we moved into."

A letter signed "Concerned Homeowners of Mount Prospect" has been sent to leaders of homeowners' groups throughout the village asking support "in letting the village know how we feel." The letter makes reference to the proposed multifamily development of the 3.3-acre Brickman property at the northwest corner of River and Camp McDonald roads, which homeowners from northeast Mount Prospect have been opposing, noting: "There are many such parcels throughout Mount Prospect, and we as citizens of Mount Prospect want to make certain these parcels of land are put to the best use for all concerned."

THE LETTER LISTS the names and home addresses of Mayor Robert D. Teichert and the six village trustees and urges residents to write "to let them know how you feel."

It also appeals for funds to continue legal efforts against unpopular rezonings.

Attorney fees in the residents' attempt to block the Brickman development could run as high as $7,000.

The letter points to the Rob Roy Golf Course, where developers hope to build 4,500 apartment and condominium units, as "a good example of what could happen to our area." "We need money to continue this fight and others that may come up in the future. If every concerned citizen helps us, we are confident we can keep Mount Prospect looking like the area we moved into."

The address listed where contributions can be sent, 1501 Park Dr., is the home of Thomas A. Helms, who, with his wife, Carolyn, has been active in the opposition to the Brickman plans. Helms and 15 other homeowners from the northeast section of the village — primarily the Woodview subdivision — last week filed a motion to intervene in Brickman's suit against the village, in which the developer is seeking rezoning for 113 condominium units and offices. The village board, in a controversial compromise, agreed to allow construction of 80 units and no commercial offices.

"LET'S FACE IT," said Robert Barrett, 1516 Park Dr., a leader of the opposition to the Brickman development. "If I were the owner of land, I would feel I could build whatever the zoning permits (the Brickman property is zoned for single-family use). But they're asking for more."

Barrett said the letter is intended to arouse village-wide concern for property rezonings. "We as neighbors should get concerned with what's happening in our community. We're talking about all parcels throughout Mount Prospect. They should be zoned in the best interests of all the people."

Village asks for favorable boundary ruling

The Village of Mount Prospect asked a Cook County Circuit Court judge Tuesday to rule in the village's favor in its continuing boundary dispute with the City of Des Plaines.

Clifford L. Weaver, an attorney representing Mount Prospect, filed a motion "for judgment on the pleadings" requesting Judge Arthur L. Dunne to issue a decision based solely on documents already filed with the court.

Dunne set a June 4 date to hear arguments on the motion. If the judge grants the motion, Mount Prospect's annexation of property near Elmhurst and Algonquin roads being fought over by the two towns would hold up. If he denies the motion, arguments would proceed on whether Des Plaines' prior annexation of the same pieces of property is valid.

Tuesday's brief discussion in the judge's Civic Center chambers signaled

To federal extortion charges

Wheeling politician pleads guilty

by LYNN ASINOF

James Stavros pleaded guilty Tuesday in U.S. District Court to extorting a total of $82,000 from three Wheeling developers and filing a false 1972 income tax return.

'It's a small world after all'

Theme for the Mount Prospect Fourth of July parade is "It's a small world after all" — originally a Walt Disney phrase.

Visitors to Disneyland in California, Disney World in Florida or to the Disney display at the 1964-65 New York World's Fair may recall seeing the displays with the "It's a Small World" theme. The exhibits have hundreds of animated dolls grouped together and dressed in costumes of various countries of the world.

Deadline today for business licenses

Today is the deadline for Mount Prospect businesses to obtain village business licenses, however many have not submitted applications.

Sue Childers of the village clerk's office reported Tuesday some 300 applications for licenses have been received. During the past year, 550 licenses were issued.

Mrs. Childers also noted that several forms sent by the clerk's office to local businesses have been returned uncompleted, though with payment enclosed, and others have been completed, but accompanying checks have been made out in the wrong amount. Business licenses cost a flat $10 plus at least $20, based on square footage of the business.

Mount Prospect Police Cadet Bruce Mazurkiewicz will be dispatched, probably next month, to ascertain whether all businesses have obtained licenses. He also will check to see that vending machines are licensed; 256 were licensed this year, according to Mrs. Childers, who suspects that several are not licensed.

May 1 also is the deadline for liquor licenses to be renewed. According to the village attorney's office, the 31 licenses held in the village are being renewed with no significant changes. Liquor licenses cost $250 to $2,000.

Remodeling for 2 junior highs OKd

After more than two weeks of discussion, the Elk Grove Township Elementary Dist. 59 School Board finally approved the controversial remodeling projects at Grove and Dempster junior high schools, officially awarding the contract to Meyer Ross Inc., the low bidder.

The board voted 5 to 0 to favor of awarding the $1,109,160 contract that will allow construction at the two schools to begin this summer. Board members Judy Zanca and Avis Wold abstained from voting.

Mrs. Zanca and Mrs. Wold, who were appointed by Board Pres. Gerald Smiley last week to review the remodeling plans, presented a long list of proposed changes in remodeling plans.

THE LIST INCLUDED money saving ideas such as fewer and less expensive lighting fixtures and carpeting instead of refitting in some areas.

The board approved the bid with the provision that Mrs. Zanca's and Mrs. Wold's suggestions would be discussed with the district's architect.

The two female board members had proposed that only heating and ventilating work be done at the two schools with the rest of the project being entirely revamped and rebid.

They were criticized by some fellow board members for making their proposal as construction was about to begin. The referendum for the remodeling was approved last June and the board hopes to start construction this summer.

The original bid was $1,119,162 which was far below other bids received. After rechecking their bid, due to the large discrepancy, Meyer Ross officials discovered they had omitted items totaling $37,650.

THE COMPANY AGREED to absorb about $10,000 of the loss, with the school district picking up the remaining $27,650, bringing the revised bid to $1,146,812. Construction cuts made by the district brought the bid down by $37,000, to $1,109,812.

The district architect, Tom Kelley, advised against rebidding the project at this time, since constantly rising costs would mean that even with moneysaving cuts in remodeling plans, the project would probably still end up costing the same, if not more.

Acting on board directions, Supt. James Erviti has already trimmed $37,000 from the original remodeling bid while rearranging other costs to allow the district to set up a $65,000 contingency fund from the project.

The low bidder on the project came in substantially higher than expected and it was first thought the project would be about $100,000 short in funds. Interest on the $1,250,000 raised from bonds which were sold to finance the project is expected to make up the difference, however.

Each country's group of dolls sing the "It's a Small World" theme song in its own language.

This imaginative theme for the local parade will provide a "large world" of float ideas.

It seems that the dad-to-be was in a combined student-faculty play at Crystal Lake High School where he teaches. Ron was playing a big white rabbit, complete with whiskers, white makeup and bunny suit, at the time the baby was due.

Luckily, baby Rachel Susan didn't arrive during the play.

by TONI GINETTI

Suburbs urged to define goals

Northwest suburban business and community leaders must begin immediately to define "suburban goals" and a "suburban strategy" if they are to have a voice in their future, a national political researcher said Tuesday.

Speaking before representatives of local chambers of commerce at the Greenhouse Restaurant in Palatine, Lawrence K. Brainard of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States said there is no common voice speaking in behalf of the 2 million persons living in the suburban Chicago area. Because of that, downstate and Chicago leaders are deciding questions directly affecting the suburbs.

"Without the development of some kind of suburban strategy, the suburban voters will continue to think in terms of the old rural or urban type without seeing what is best for the suburbs as a unit," Brainard warned. "This kind of splintering will just keep them apart."

BRAINARD, a political and legislative affairs researcher for the U.S. Chamber association and a lobbyist for 35 congressional districts in Illinois and Indiana, said economic growth in the Northwest suburbs in the past decade has made the area "the new economic base of the city of Chicago."

Population in the area in the past 10 years has doubled, he added, but there has been no development of a "suburban conscience."

Suburban officials have remained fragmented and have not worked together effectively for the area good, he said. He said an example of the problem is the suburban opposition to the Regional Transportation Authority, which he said many officials and suburban residents have opposed because they fear it may bring blacks and other minorities to the area.

SEVERAL CHAMBER representatives disputed Brainard, saying the opposition to RTA was based on feelings that the bill did not offer help for the suburbs. But Brainard said the lack of a suburban voice to guide the preparation of the RTA bill resulted in rural downstate leaders and Chicago leaders drafting a bill suited to them. Suburban voters then responded in the only way they knew how, a "no" vote, he said.

Brainard called on the chamber representatives to hold a series of conferences to outline what he called "suburban goals" and then to act as a lobbying group for suburban interests in the state legislature.

The areas they will need to focus on will include continued economic growth, autonomy from Chicago and improved transportation to and from other suburbs and places where suburbanites work, Brainard said. He said businessmen and municipal governments need to recognize the area's needs, eliminate duplication of services and units to influence decisions being made for the area.

Local chambers of commerce in the Northwest suburbs have voted to form a Northwest Suburban Chamber of Commerce Assn.

The association, which has been discussed by the local groups since September, will attempt to act as a voice for business and industry in the area. The group may also serve as a lobby in legislative matters dealing with business and industry in the suburbs.

The association Tuesday elected Harry O'Brien, director of the Rolling Meadows Chamber, to head the association. Elected as vice president was Stanley Klyber, of the Elk Grove Assn. of Industry and Commerce; treasurer, Bud Patz, of the Bensenville Chamber; and secretary, Marge Alt, of the Rolling Meadows Chamber.

Committees for the group have also been established. Earl Johnson, executive manager of the Arlington Heights Chamber will head the membership committee; Clarence Schlaver of the Mount Prospect Chamber will serve as publicity chairman and Marion Bauer of the Palatine Chamber will head the special events committee.

O'Brien has been a main force behind organization of the chamber group. He has served as Rolling Meadows Chamber director since June, 1973. Prior to that he had been a district manager for the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce.

O'BRIEN HAS SAID the chamber association may become involved in several projects soon, including extending the limits of the Chicago Trucking Zone to the suburban area. The zone encompasses metropolitan Chicago and a 10-mile radius of the city. In those limits special trucking and freight rates are charged for deliveries to businesses and industries. Rates for deliveries to suburban businesses are substantially higher.

The formation of the association was first discussed last fall among representatives of the Elk Grove, Arlington Heights, Palatine, Wheeling, Mount Prospect, Barrington, Itasca, Bensenville, Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates, Des Plaines, Schaumburg and Rolling Meadows chambers.

The group has drafted bylaws that will be reviewed by local chambers prior to their formal adoption, O'Brien said. The association plans to meet June 18 in Des Plaines.

Most area chamber officials had expressed support for the concept of the association. Johnson said Tuesday he was enthusiastic about the group. "I think that this is a very natural kind of progression," he said.

Village asks for favorable boundary ruling

a formal end to out-of-court negotiations between the two municipalities to settle their boundary disagreement.

DES PLAINES CITY Corporation Counsel Robert DiLeonardi told the judge of efforts to reach a compromise. Des Plaines had proposed Elmhurst Road as an east-west dividing line and Oakton Street as a north-south dividing line west of Elmhurst Road. The suggestion was accepted by Mount Prospect, but Des Plaines later backed out, suggesting Oakton be eliminated as a boundary.

"My own personal feeling is it's very unfortunate it fell through the way it has," DiLeonardi said. "I recommended it (passage of the original agreement) very strongly."

Weaver said Mount Prospect "stands already to abide by the agreement we made. If Des Plaines will simply ratify the agreement, we could settle the dispute."

With the failure of out-of-court efforts to reach an agreeable boundary line, resolution apparently will have to come in the courts. The disputed area includes the Waterfall and Terranova restaurants, Colonial apartments and several gas stations. The Waterfall has filed a motion to intervene in the case, to protect its late hour liquor license.

Both communities are anxious to annex the disputed property in order to reap tax benefits and spread their growth.

Does suburbia need those new hospitals?

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
First in a series

A hospital building boom is following the population, branching out from the central city and rushing into suburbia.

Schaumburg, Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Barrington top a list of proposed Northwest suburban hospital sites that divides planning experts and excites local civil leaders.

Suburban officials, with eyes on a substantial increase in community services at little direct cost to taxpayers, are greeting the hospital derby with open arms. But, planners are warning that proposed construction will greatly exceed demand for new beds, pushing up hospital costs to all patients.

Seven new hospitals are proposed for suburbs in DuPage, northwest Cook and Lake counties. More than 1,512 new beds are planned. Total construction could exceed $80 million.

THE LIST OF proposed projects in metropolitan Chicago, which now has 30,502 hospital beds, includes 30 new hospitals or satellites and grows weekly.

Actual need for hospital construction is a controversy among administrators and health planners. Projections vary, one recently released report shows a need for 94 additional beds in local suburbs by 1979 and another predicts a demand for 750 more beds by 1980.

The Hospital Explosion

Area hospital proposals include:

- Schaumburg: A 180-bed, $12 million satellite of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago was approved in October by the Illinois Hospital Licensing Board. Construction is planned this summer and the hospital is seeking $42 million in low-interest bonds from the Illinois Health Facilities Authority to build tandem projects in Schaumburg and Park Forest.

- Hoffman Estates: A 312-bed, $14.3 million for-profit hospital operated as a franchise of American Mediacorp Inc. of Pennsylvania has received a state permit and opening is expected in early 1976.

- Wheeling: a 228-bed, $11.3 million general hospital proposed by Franklin Boulevard Hospital of Chicago was approved by the licensing board April 10.

- Glendale Heights: a 186-bed, $7.9 million general hospital proposed by Central Community Hospital of Chicago received state approval in December. Central Community is a sister hospital of Franklin Boulevard and the controversial project is similar to the planned facility in Wheeling.

- Barrington: a 226-bed, $11.7 million hospital is planned for fall construction by the Evangelical Hospital Assn. The "Good Shepherd Hospital" will be one of a three-hospital "system" that includes Christ Community Hospital in Oak Lawn and Good Samaritan Hospital under construction in Downers Grove.

- Addison: a 180-bed, $12.5 million hospital is part of a long-range plan by DuPage Memorial Hospital of Elmhurst. The project was approved in December by the state and includes initial construction of an emergency treatment facility and a physician office-clinic.

- Glenview-Northbrook: a 200-bed, $13 million satellite of Evanston Hospital is state approved. The acute-care hospital project drew homeowners' protests during plan commission hearings in January but was annexed and rezoned by the

The breakdown by hospital...

Results of a Northwest Cook County hospital inventory show 1,531 existing beds with a projected need for 94 additional beds, or a total of 1,625. No new hospitals are recommended. The 94 beds could be added to existing facilities, the state hospital plan indicates.

Hospital	Existing Beds	1973 Admissions
Northwest Community	433	14,437
Resurrection	157	4,362
Holy Family	240	9,210
Alexian Brothers	302	14,344
Lutheran General	399	19,121
TOTAL	1,531	61,474

Glenview Village Board April 15. Mt. Sinai Hospital Medical Center of Chicago and Sherman Hospital of Elgin also are considering suburban expansion. Sherman received licensing board permission April 10 to build a 125-bed, $6 million hospital in Crystal Lake. Mt. Sinai, which has announced plans for a north suburban branch, reportedly has an option for 125-acres at Dundee and Sanders roads in Northbrook.

PREDICTIONS OF need for hospital construction are "tricky and controversial," according to Ted Brzyski, Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission health planning officer. Bed need projections are kept secret as "in-house, working" documents by the numerous health-planning agencies that examine hospital construction proposals. Each agency has individual statistics and formulas for determining construction need.

Need for hospital construction "is nothing like the five, six or seven they're talking about," said urbanologist Pierre de Vise, former head of the Chicago Regional Hospital Study. "Unoccupied beds in local hospitals could increase by 20 per cent if all proposed hospitals are built," he said.

The controversy is statistical. Planning agencies use complicated formulas that include estimated future population, daily hospital admissions, number of existing beds, residence and age of patients and type of treatment to estimate need for hospital construction.

The "bible" of bed-need estimates is the Illinois Comprehensive State Health Planning Agency's "Survey and Plan," a bi-annual report designed to guarantee "adequate" health services "without unnecessary duplication."

IN 1972, THE STATE report listed 1,534 existing beds in the Northwest suburban area at Resurrection Hospital in Chicago, Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village, Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights and Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines. Projected six-year bed need for the area was 544 additional beds.

The revised, 1974 state plan, released in preliminary form this month, now shows a need for only 94 additional beds in the area by 1979, despite increased population. Spokesmen for the state said the 450-bed decrease in projected need is caused by changes in the bed-need for-

Planner charges public land figures false

Kay Muller charged at a joint session of the village board of trustees and the plan commission Tuesday night that the village administration has made a "deliberate attempt to misrepresent" the distributions of dedications by developers of lands for public use.

Mrs. Muller made her charge after fellow plan commissioner Madeline Schroeder said the village was not following land dedication procedures spelled out by subdivision control ordinances.

Mrs. Schroeder said the land donations, according to ordinance, were to go for school districts, parks, the village and other public uses. She said that almost all negotiations were being handled by Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson and not by the other agencies mentioned in the ordinance.

"I feel very uncomfortable . . . if we have an ordinance on the books and we don't follow it," she said.

Jack Walsh, village president, said Hanson was doing "nothing different" than what had been the procedure for 15 years.

MRS. MULLER, at this point, said a document supplied the park district by the village administration did not represent an accurate picture of land distribution after dedication by developers. She said she was "totally outraged by this document."

Mrs. Muller, a recent appointee to the plan commission, is vice president of the Arlington Heights Park District.

"This is a deliberate attempt to misrepresent these facts," she said, adding they were "designed not to inform us . . . but calculated to deceive us."

She said the discrepancies were "so flagrant as to be deliberate."

Walsh then said Mrs. Muller was "confusing your park board and plan commissioner's hats." He said the joint session was to isolate problems and not to provide platforms for individual points of view.

MRS. MULLER circulated a chart disputing the village-supplied land dedication figures. Her document claimed the park district had received only 88.2 acres of land, including 8.9 acres of creekbed and roadways, while the village claimed to have allocated 106.45 acres of land from developers. She placed a value of $501,000 on the land, compared with a village figure of $1.2 million.

She said the village actually controlled in excess of 31-acres, valued at $708,000, instead of 2.5 acres valued at $243,000 as listed in the village document.

School districts in the area received about 51 acres valued at $633,000 rather than the village's figures of 34 acres worth $890,00.

Hanson had no direct answer to Mrs. Muller's allegations. Walsh said the question would be referred to the village board to study as a committee of the whole.

MIKE MASSARI OF Rolling Meadows recently made this deep impression with onlookers at the intersection of Busse and Central roads between Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights. It took a tow truck and some quick patch-up work by Milburn Brothers construction crews to smooth over the sticky situation. Massari, made a right turn onto Busse Road and went 12 feet along the freshly-poured cement before stopping.

Stavros pleads guilty to 4 federal charges

by LYNN ASINOF

James Stavros pleaded guilty Tuesday in U.S. District Court to extorting a total of $82,000 from three Wheeling developers and filing a false 1972 income tax return.

The guilty pleas came as part of an agreement with the U. S. Attorney's Office in which eight additional counts against Stavros were dropped, including charges of extorting an additional $121,250 from Wheeling developers.

STAVROS, FORMER Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, faces a maximum of 63 years imprisonment and up to $35,000 in fines. Sentencing is scheduled for June 4 before U. S. District Judge Hubert Will.

In changing his plea, Stavros, 43, admitted to:

- Extorting $32,000 from the Zale Construction Co., developers of Lakeside Villas, in the spring of 1971.

- Extorting $30,000 from Bernard Kron of Harmony Builders, developers of Harmony Village, in January 1973.

- Extorting $30,000 with Wheeling Building Dr. William Bieber from the Meister-Nelberg Co., developers of Lake of the Winds, in December 1972.

- Filing a false 1972 income tax return

in which he "substantially understated his income."

The U. S. Attorney's Office gathered massive amounts of evidence of payoffs to Stavros, which was to be presented during the trial scheduled to begin Monday. A bill of particulars filed by the government charged that Stavros extorted more than $300,000 from developers beginning in 1968.

THE GOVERNMENT planned to picture Stavros as an extortionist who threatened his victims with physical harm unless they paid him off. The prosecutors intended to show Stavros' control over key Wheeling positions, which enabled him to threaten developers with permit and construction delays.

The new income tax charge was filed by the U. S. Attorney's Office Tuesday just prior to Stavros' change of plea. The one-count criminal information did not specify how much 1972 income Stavros failed to report.

"We also filed with the court an agreement which was entered into, which in essence stated that he would plead guilty to the things I've described and at the time of disposition the remaining counts would be dismissed," said Asst. U. S. Atty. Steven Kadison.

KADISON SAID his office will make known its case against Stavros at the time of sentencing.

Stavros' attorney, Robert J. Butler, said the agreement filed in court provides his client with substantial protection against further prosecutions.

"All pending investigations will be terminated," Butler said. "The U. S. Attorney will not prosecute for any other violations prior to the year 1974. The agreement is quite comprehensive. It covers all pending and contemplated charges and current investigations."

While Butler would not comment on whether Stavros was providing informa-

The group has drafted bylaws that will be reviewed by local chambers prior to their formal adoption, O'Brien said. The association plans to meet June 18 in Des Plaines.

Health care survey set for seniors

A questionnaire on health care for elderly residents will be drafted by some members of the Arlington Heights Senior Citizens Commission to find what services are needed in the community.

Health care was listed as the major concern among 69 per cent of the senior citizens who responded to a general survey conducted earlier this year by the village. A more detailed questionnaire concerning health care only is needed to pinpoint specific problems.

John Gianopoulos, chairman of the commission, said he, Dr. Allen Hoffman and Frank Charleton of the village health department met with officials at Northwest Community Hospital to see what joint senior citizens projects both parties could enter.

"We were at a loss as to what specific recommendations we could make," Gianopoulos said at a meeting Tuesday night. He added that an ad hoc committee will be meeting with hospital representatives next Monday to finalize the questionnaire. If approved by the commission, the questionnaire could be sent out to the senior citizens in early June.

MENTAL HEALTH, hot meal, transportation, housing and educational programs are some projects that the commission hopes to institute.

"We should not only look at courses which offer skills and interest like crafts," Gianopoulos said of educational opportunities. He said that more senior citizens can be used in the schools. For example they could tutor young students in reading. "Let's use the talents we have."

Representatives from the village housing commission, Arlington elementary, high school and college districts and Northwest Community Hospital will be invited to a May 21 meeting to discuss programs.

Also at that time, a formal hearing will be held for senior citizens who did not respond to the commission's questionnaire conducted earlier this year. They will have an opportunity to air problems and concerns at that time.

Correction

Openings are available for students from first through eighth grades at St. James School in Arlington Heights during formal registration. The Herald yesterday incorrectly stated that openings were only in first through fourth grades.

Tuition for the 1974-75 school year is $285 for one child per family, $375 for two and $435 for three or more children per family.
